Federal Agents Seize Robinson, Stoll Kidnaper

Captured Without Shot at Glendale, Calif.; Is Undisguised.

Called From Bout, Hoover Tells Press

Abductor Has $4,200 of Ransom Money; Admits Identity.

Thomas H. Robinson, jr., the mad Stoll kidnaper, was captured last night in Glendale, Cal., by Department of Justice agents.

He had been Public Enemy No. 1 barely four days when Federal agents cornered him at 10 p. m. (E. S. T.) in the apartment house where he lived two months under the nom de plume, "John Simons."

J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Bureau of Investigation, left a ringside seat at the featherweight boxing championship fight to proclaim arrest of the last of a long list of kidnapers.

Not a shot was fired, he reported, although Robinson had a .38 caliber pistol on his person.

Within a few minutes after he was run down, Robinson was slipped aboard a chartered plane and started for Louisville, Ky.

On his arrival there today he will be confronted by the attractive young woman he abducted October 10, 1934, Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll.

The youthful Robinson—he hasn't turned 30 yet—was not in his characteristic disguise as a blonde woman when the international search ended.

Police Uninformed.

A dozen or more agents surrounded his apartment and surprised him. He was handcuffed and rushed from the State before Glendale police knew what had happened.

First word of his apprehension was made public in Washington by Hoover. The actual capturers referred inquirers to their chief in the capital.

A broad smile played on Hoover's face when a reporter asked whether Robinson admitted his identity.

"He didn't have to," he responded.

Hoover declined to divulge details of the manner in which Robinson was located. The inference was plain, however, that he was trailed through the $50,000 ransom in small bills he received before releasing his victim.

He had $4,500 in his possession when caught. Of that sum, Hoover revealed, $4,200 was ascertained definitely to be part of the ransom.

Robinson looked about the same as when he dropped from sight nearly two years ago, Hoover said, except for a small mustache he wore to change his appearance.

Only last week when another temporary Public Enemy No. 1, William ("Scarface") Mahan was arrested in San Francisco as the Justice agents moved swiftly to wipe clean the slate of kidnapers, Hoover elevated Robinson to the top of the list with this comment:

"It's just a matter of time until we get that rat, too."

Mrs. Stoll Lackett's Niece.

Mrs. Stoll is the wife of Berry V. Stoll, Louisville oil man and niece of the late Frederic M. Sackett, former Senator and Ambassador to Germany.

Mrs. Stoll, wife of wealthy Louisville oil company official, was clubbed into insensibility by a man who broke into their fashionable suburban home on October 10, 1934. A blood-stained iron pipe was found in the house.

Federal agents were notified and flew to Louisville to take up the trail. Stoll carried out instructions in a note from the kidnaper to prepare $50,000 in small bills. Efforts to contact the kidnaper failed for almost a week.

During that time Stoll feared his wife might be critically ill or dead. She had been under treatment by a physician for several days due to a severe cold. Also it was feared the blow on her head might have resulted in a critical injury.

Finally the money was paid through an intermediary. Two days later Federal agents and Louisville police received a "tip" that Mrs. Stoll was being returned in an automobile from Indianapolis.

The automobile was intercepted at a crossroads a few miles north of Louisville. Mrs. Stoll was accompanied by Mrs. Frances Robinson, wife of the alleged kidnaper.

Wife Acquitted.

Mrs. Robinson was tried and acquitted on charges of complicity in the kidnaping. Mrs. Stoll said she had been held by Robinson in a Indianapolis apartment, but that she had not been mistreated.

When Federal agents raided the apartment Robinson had left. For a week, agents alternately picked up his trail and lost it as he fled across several States.

Robinson escaped capture for almost two years because of his ability to impersonate a woman and the fact that he had no known gang connections.

Robinson, prior to his implication in the Stoll kidnaping was a Nashville, Tenn., lawyer. He had had several previous scrapes with the law and at one time was confined to a sanatorium for mental observation.

His father, Thomas H. Robinson, a Nashville attorney, was dragged into the case. That was when he tried to locate his son after the kidnaping, so as to return Mrs. Stoll to her family. He was tried, but acquitted, on a charge of complicity in the crime.

Giant Zeppelin Off, Challenges Record of Graf

Dr. Eckener Praises Hybla Valley as Dirigible Airport Site.

By the Associated Press.

Lakehurst, N. J., May 11.—The German dirigible Hindenburg sailed away from the naval air station, homeward bound for Frankfurt, at 10:27 (E. S. T.) tonight.

The command "up ship" was given five minutes after the ship was cut loose from its mooring mast. It headed immediately toward New York City, with a searchlight from the top of the naval hangar playing on its sides.

Flying higher and much faster than on her arrival Saturday morning the silvered ship was sighted over the Battery in New York at 11:06 p. m. Over 6,000 people were waiting there. They cheered and boats in the harbor opened up their whistles. Apparently using Broadway for a guide line, the German visitor passed over Times Square at 11:14 p. m. Automobile traffic halted. Spetcators jammed streets and hotel roofs. Gaining altitude and speed, the zeppelin was last sighted over East Harlem at 11:15, heading out to sea.

The ship carried 47 passengers, a crew of 54, 1,751 pounds of mail and 3,394 pounds of express.

The great dirigible was moved slowly out of the hangar at 9 p. m. (E. S. T.).

It was tied up at the mooring circle to await the boarding of passengers and the loading of mail before pointing its nose toward New York City.

Shortly before the undocking, Dr. Hugo Eckener, veteran dirigible skipper and now president of the Zeppelin company, predicted the huge airship would reach the European coast in 46 hours and better the eastward record of 55 hours 22 minutes, set by the Graf Zeppelin seven years ago, "by six or seven hours."

Dr. Eckener said officials in Washington whom he visited today had been "very friendly, very hopeful" about his plan for German-American commercial dirigible service across the North Atlantic, but said there would be no decision until after the Hindenburg makes the ten round-trip demonstration flights planned for it this summer.

Of President Roosevelt, he said: "The President is a very wise man. He says one flight is no flight."

The grizzled airship expert said the Hindenburg would take the great circle route home, as it did on its westward flight. Asked if he would return on the next trip—the ship is due to return to Lakehurst May 19—he said it depended on "the work on my writing table when I get home," and also on the weather.

"If the weather is bad," he said,

Secret Probe Hints District Penal Expose

House Unit Investigates Allegations of Lorton Graft, Politics.

Hearings Likely Soon on Peak-Barnard-Street Succession Feud.

By James D. Secrest.

An undercover investigation of multiple charges of politics, favoritism and petty graft in the operation of the District Reformatory and Workhouse at Lorton and Occoquan, Va., has been conducted during recent weeks by a special sub-committee of the House District Committee, it was learned yesterday.

As a consequence, District officials under whose direction the penal institutions are operated will be called before the sub-committee for questioning, either in executive or public sessions, following a meeting the latter part of this week.

The inquiry may lead to an expose, one sub-committee member predicted, that will force a change in the administration and may undermine the position of the director of public welfare, Elwood Street.

"Brick Shipped in Caskets."

Evidence gathered by the sub-committee is understood to be tenuous but sensational. It varies from charges that prisoners have been enrolled in a political move to block Col. William L. Peak from becoming superintendent of penal institutions to rumors that brick made at Lorton have been secretly hauled away in caskets after being landed at the municipal wharf.

The probe was ordered, it is understood, after the District Committee received numerous complaints that efforts were being made to bring an outsider in to succeed the aging M. M. Barnard, superintendent of penal institutions, when he finally retires.

Capt. Barnard, who made a reputation as the founder and perpetrator of the "honor system" at Lorton, is in his seventies, well past the retirement age, but is on an indefinite extension by Executive order.

Ouster Move Blocked.

A move to oust Barnard some months ago was blocked by the District Commissioners when they refused to appoint in his place Harold E. Donnell, Maryland State penal institution head.

Since then a political fight between supporters of Peak and friends of Barnard has been growing in intensity with Elwood Street lined up against Peak.

Charges made to the sub-committee have been to the effect that Barnard has sought to undermine loyalty to Peak at the District Reformatory as well to prevent his appointment as Barnard's successor.

Numerous civic organizations have adopted resolutions indorsing the candidacy of Peak for the general penal superintendent's job, and substantial indorsements from members of the House and the Senate have been obtained.

According to complaints made to the sub-committee, Barnard and Street are agreeable to the appointment of almost anyone to the job except Peak.

Besides calling Barnard, Street and Peak to explain the charges and to clear the atmosphere, the sub-committee, it is said, will summon some of the guards, and perhaps prisoners, from Lorton to question them regarding the reports both as to political activities and petty graft.

The investigation, if any of the more sensational charges are sustained, may be carried over into the summer or be recessed until next session. If, however, it fails to disclose any nefarious activities, the hearings may be adjourned abruptly.

The sub-committee has expressed interest in a reported salary increase of $2,400 a year for Thomas M. Rives, superintendent of the District jail, when he succeeded Peak.

Two years ago Representative Shoemaker (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, made general charges of graft and maladministration against Capt. Barnard and other penal institution officials on the House floor.

Shoemaker's charges were investigated in a series of open hearings by a committee of the Board of Public Welfare. None were substantiated and Barnard and other officials were vindicated.

Tax Bill Test Is Postponed By Harrison

Senator Requests Vote Be Delayed in Senate Committee.

Morgenthau Writes Byrd He Cannot Supply Earnings Data.

Definitely on the defensive for the first time since the President's revolutionary tax plan was laid before Congress, Administration leadership yesterday staved off a test vote in the Senate Finance Committee until high Government officials can testify on the bill.

With opposition to the proposed corporate earnings tax fast mounting in the committee, Chairman Pat Harrison requested time for the Treasury to answer the preponderant array of testimony against the measure, and the committee consented.

It was learned that Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, asked a vote on corporate tax proposals as the committee met in executive session, but did not press his demands against Harrison's wishes. One committee member said the controverted provision, as now drafted, would have been defeated, 2 to 1, had a showdown been forced.

Meanwhile, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., wrote Senator Harry Flood Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, a leader of the conservative movement against the bill, that he could not supply him legally with 1935 earnings data on corporations Byrd believes will pay little or no tax under the bill.

Sees No Illegality.

Senator Byrd, who had caused a committee resolution to be adopted yesterday morning asking for the information, told reporters he saw nothing to bar "legal" compliance with his request, but if necessary he would ask the committee to adopt another resolution this morning.

Obviously irritated at publication of the Byrd letter to him before he received it, Secretary Morgenthau commented sharply to newsmen:

"I don't make a habit of releasing letters before they are received."

Earlier, Byrd had asked that Morgenthau be called personally before the Finance Committee to satisfy his inquiries on the bill. He probably will appear tomorrow. Three other Administration chieftains were invited to testify today—Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace and Herman Oliphant, Treasury counsel.

New Presentation.

It was learned that Secretary Morgenthau has discussed the situation with both Jones and Wallace. The Department of Agriculture head is expected to present anew the Administration's case for processing taxes, sidetracked by the House, and left unconsidered by the Senate. Wallace also will discuss the proposed "windfall" tax on refunded processing levies, and refunding of floor stock taxes proposed in the bill.

Jones is expected to go into the matter of how banks will be affected under the measure, and the situation as to railroads, which are asking preferential treatment. Oliphant, who has followed the legislation closely through the House, and into the Senate, will summarize the Treasury's defense.

Morgenthau, in his reply to Byrd yesterday, noted the Virginian's letter to him was postmarked 5 p. m., May 9, and received at his office at 9:14 a. m. yesterday. At his press conference, the Treasury secretary alluded to his receipt of the letter long after reading morning papers carrying the text of the Virginian's request.

"In your letter," Morgenthau wrote Byrd, "you furnish a list of corporations with the amount of their net income and the amount of their dividends paid out in 1934, as reported in Moody's Manual, and and you ask that I check this list and let you have a similar list for 1935 if such statistics are available.

"You request also the names of all corporations which, for the last year for which statistics are available have a net income before Federal taxes of more than a million dollars and, based upon theactual distribution for the year, will receive a tax reduction fo 50 per cent or more under the pending bill."

Morgenthau then referred Byrd to the section of the revenue law authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to make such information

Sarron Wins Title Before 21,000 Fans

Last night at Griffith Stadium 21,000 spectators saw Pete Sarron score a spectacular comeback to gain a decision over Freddie Miller in a 15-round encounter and gain the world's featherweight championship. Sarron, unable to land many blows in the early rounds, outlasted the Cincinnati titleholder to win.

Receipts for Washington's first championship fight were estimated at $40,000. The bout was promoted by the Metropolitan Police Department for the benefit of the Police Boys Clubs.

League Recognition Denied Italy's Conquest of Ethiopia; Rome Considers Geneva Bolt

Reported Ready to Quit if Claim in Africa Is Unrecognized.

War on Annexation Believed Unlikely

Count Volpi to Guide Industry Exploitation of Colonial State.

By the United Press.

Rome, May 11.—Premier Benito Mussolini will abandon the League of Nations if it ultimately decides Ethiopia is still a member of the League and regards Wolde Mariam a legitimate representative, it was reported tonight.

However, it was not believed the League would go so far as to lose an important member rather than abandon what was described as an "impracticable principle."

The Senate will meet in an extraordinary session Saturday to ratify Il Duce's proclamation annexing Ethiopia as an Italian colony.

Meanwhile, the meeting of the League of Nations Council at Geneva found all Italy with deep-rooted conviction that the League is powerless to alter the Italo-Ethiopian situation, which Italy considered definitely ended with the declaration of Italian sovereignty over Emperor Haile Selassie's ancient kingdom.

Doubts War Will Ensue.

Italian officials believed that only war could change the status of Ethiopia, but that no nation will start a conflict, sure to spread to a world conflagration, for the sake of Ethiopia or the League.

Mussolini already has announced that Italy will not give up the fruits of her East African victory without a supreme struggle.

Italy is convinced that the League Council will reach no definite conclusions before mid-June because:

1. Members are not in accord regarding maintenance or abandonment of sanctions.

2. France deems it inopportune to change her conciliatory attitude at least until the new government assumes power June 2.

3. Great Britain is not in a position to persist on intrasigeance because an important section of Conservatives, led by Winston Churchill and Austen Chamberlain, is demanding a change in front.

Aksum Coronation Plan.

Rome, May 11 (AP).—King Victor Emmanuel of Italy may be crowned Emperor of Ethiopia in the holy Ethiopian city of Aksum, an official source disclosed tonight.

Protocol officials of the government are now studying the proposal, this source asserted, attempting to determine whether the coronation of Queen Victoria of Great Britain as Empress of India furnished a precedent for the projected ceremonies.

(Defense of the holy Ethiopian city, reported hiding place of the sacred Ark of the Covenant, led Emperor Haile Selassie to declare the struggle against the Italian invaders a "holy war" last fall.

(The city fell to the Fascist warriors October 13 without a single gunshot.)

Plans for industrial development of the newly-proclaimed Italian territory were placed in the hands of Count Giuseppe Volpi, president of the Fascist Confederation of Industrialists.

Count Volpi was instructed to organize technical groups to develop Ethiopia as the Senate was ordered into a special session Saturday, probably to ratify the grand council's and cabinet's proclamation of a new Roman empire.

Premier Mussolini, dividing his time between supervising domestic affairs and following reports of the eLague of Nations Council meeting at Geneva, was reported to have begun reorganization of his cabinet.

Political sources asserted the dictator will relinquish three cabinet positions, promoting present undersecretaries to the higher rank. The Duce now holds eight portfolios personally.

Britain's Secret War Games Open in Mediterranean Today

Army, Navy, Air Forces Plan Maneuvers Near Italian Soil.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 11.—Combined army, navy and air force maneuvers to test the defenses of Great Britain's Mediterranean station of Malta will start tomorrow and continue through Wednesday night.

Warships and shore batteries will fire intermittently, troops and planes will be put through secret tests less than 100 miles from the Italian soil of Sicily, as ordered by Sir Bolton Eyres-Monsell, first lord of the admiralty.

As the scouting forces of the navy proceed to sea, troops will man anti-aircraft defense stations and underground stations over the island will be occupied by civilians. A special defense transport pool composed of hundreds of buses, will be mobilized.

Commanding officers will direct part of the test from speical underground gas-proof offices.

A special session of the British cabinet under Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin was held late today. Informed sources said Italy's annexation of Ethiopia was the principal business before the ministers.

Great Britain, which has had most of her great fleet in and around the Mediterranean since tension developed with Italy late last summer, withdrew most of her fastest ships from Malta and sent them to the Suez Canal.

But the government last August sent 1,300 more troops to reinforce the strategic Mediterranean island.

Civilians on the island have been given repeated anti-aircraft drills.

During the Italo-British tension, military experts pointed out that Malta is in easy flying range of Italy's huge home air force, which has bases in Sicily.

SIR BOLTEN EYRES-MONSELL.

Aloisi Declines to Sit With Wolde Mariam Group's Action.

Executive Session Opened by Council

Sanctions Remain in Force as Delegates Refuse to Act.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, May 11 (AP).—The League of Nations Council, deadlocked with Premier Mussolini on the conquest of Ethiopia, was summoned for a secret, unofficial session tonight to the home of Joseph A. C. Avenol, League secretary-general.

The purpose of the meeting, it was understood, was to discuss what action the council will take on the Italo-Ethiopian war tomorrow.

Baron Pompeo Aloisi, Italian delegate who earlier had abruptly left a secret council meeting, did not attend tonight's gathering.

British delegates said the league would resist Italy's claim of sovereignty. Aloisi, finding the council opposed to him, simply walked out of an opening council session with his colleagues.

"Futile," exclaimed the Italian baron as he stalked out, refusing to sit at the table with Wolde Mariam, whose country—Ethiopia—he said, no longer exists.

Resistance by the League, said the British, means:

1. The League does not recognize Italy's claim to sovereignty over Ethiopia.

2. The League does recognize the continued existence of Emperor Haile Selassie's Ethiopian government.

Through Aloisi, Il Duce demanded the outright removal of the Italo-Ethiopian dupute from the Council's agenda on the grounds "there is no Ethiopian state. The only sovereignty is Italian."

Still on Agenda.

But with quiet stubborness the Council voted to keep the Ethiopian problem on the agenda.

After Aloisi stalked down the stairs out of the Council's private meeting, he turned about and walked up again into a public session, where he read a report on the election of members to the Court of International Justice.

An Italian spokesman said the walkout of the Italian delegation did not mean Italy was leaving the League.

The immediate effect of Mussolini's peremptory demand that the League take its hands off the Ethiopian question, coming after the outright annexation of the country, appeared to be a stiffening of determination among those states advocating the maintenance of sanctions. Certainly no definite move was made in the direction of lifting sanctions.

Several Council members said the logical next move would be to condemn Italy's action and then adjourn until June, when a new Leftist French government will have been formed.

Says League Is Saved.

One League official went so far as to say: "Mussolini today saved the League."

He meant that Il Duce's whip-cracking attitude practically forced statesmen to rally to the League's support.

When the crucial Council session began, Aloisi in a prepared speech, declared:

"All discussion of the Italo-Ethiopian difference is futile."

Great Britain's foreign secretary, Anthony Eden, then asked coolly whether, "under the circumstances," the Italo-Ethiopian question should be kept on the agenda?"

Without a dissenting vote, a motion by Denmark and Spain for its retention was adopted.

Aloisi then prepared to leave, but paused to tell the delegates:

"I have the honor to declare that the Italian delegation cannot admit of the presence at the Council table of the so-called Ethiopian delegate.

"There exists, indeed, no semblance of organization of the Ethiopian state.

"The only sovereignty existing in Ethiopia is that of Italy.

"All discussion on the subject of the Italo-Ethiopian differences would, consequently, have no object.

"Therefore, I find myself obliged to refrain from patricipating in the discussion."

Earlier, the council had received a bitter protest from Emperor Haile Selassie against Italy's annexation of his empire. He im-

Path Is Cleared For House Vote On Inflation Bill

Frazier-Lemke Measure Is Taken From Rules Group; Defeat Is Predicted.

By Robert C. Albright.

Projecting before Congress the first serious inflation threat of the session, the House yesterday by a 220-to-153 vote gave right-of-way to the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing bill, providing for issuance of $3,000,000,000 of new currency to ease farm indebtedness.

Decks were cleared for consideration of the measure by a record vote discharging the House Rules Committee from control of the bill. By a mere voice vote, the House next adopted a rule for controlling debate that may bring a final ballot on the bill itself Thursday.

Reserving their fire for a later show-down, the House Administration leadership made virtually no fight on either the "discharge" motion or the rule, but flatly predicted ultimate defeat of the bill. Actual consideration of the motion consumed only three minutes.

While the House was voting privileged status for the farm mortgage refinancing measure, loaded with political fireworks, a St. Paul Federal Court of Appeals ruled unconstitutional an earlier farm relief act, by the same Congressional sponsors—the amended Frazier-Lemke three-year farm debt moratorium.

Violates Amendment.

A three-judge court said "the conclusion is inescapable the amended mortgage moratorium act, with its provision for a three-year stay, violates the fifth amendment, because it takes from appellant without compensation, valuable rights in the mortgaged property and gives them to the appellee."

The act held invalid by the St. Paul Federal Court represented reenactment, in amended form, of the Frazier-Lemke farm debt mora-

Senate Rushes Deficiency Bill, Voted in House

'Earmark' Fight Expected on $1,425,000,000 Relief Item.

By Felix Bruner.

The Senate Appropriations Committee will begin consideration of the deficiency appropriation bill, carrying $1,425,000,000 for work relief, tomorrow, with a view to reporting it out late this week or early next week and passing it ahead of the tax bill.

The House passed the bill, which includes total appropriations of $2,364,229,712, yesterday by a vote of 341 to 38. Seven Democrats and 31 Republicans voted against the measure, which remains virtually as it originally was written except for a provision that prevailing wages must be paid on WPA jobs.

It is expected that the Appropriations Committee, headed by Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, will call Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress administrator, and Secretary Harold L. Ickes, PWA administrator, to tell how last year's relief appropriation of $4,880,000,000 was spent. Ickes did not appear before the House committee.

Fight Planned on Bill.

Opponents of the Administration relief plan are expected to conduct a fight in the Senate similar to the unsuccessful opposition presented in the House. Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, is advocating aking lump allotments to the States and Senator Hayden (Democrat), Arizona, is expected to lead the fight for earmarking a part of the fund for the PWA.

Meanwhile, Representative Bacon (Republican), New York, carried his fight against the relief bill to the country in a radio talk last night. Bacon had sought to amend the bill to provide for administration of relief by commissions appointed by Governors.

"The evidence adduced in our committee hearings establishes beyond all question that, as now administered, the relief agencies are shot through with corroding and paralyzing political spoils," he said. "No State, no city, no county, has

House Passes Bill to Check Non-Resident Drivers in D. C.

While fast-driving Representative Marion A. Zioncheck and his bride were still on a honeymoon in tropical waters, the House yesterday passed without debate a bill which gives the District Commissioners power to suspend or revoke non-residents' driving permits in cases of serious traffic law infractions.

The bill was passed, along with two other District measures, in a surprise District day that caught sponsors of the Sisson bill to repeal the anti-red rider unawares.

While House leaders previously had canceled the regular District day because of the priority of the Frazier-Lemke bill, Speaker Byrns permitted Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House Committee, to call up bills on the calendar after the House had adopted a rule on the Frazier-Lemke measure and was preparing to adjourn out of respect to the memory of Senator Trammell.

Because of the lateness of the hour, however, and as Representative Sisson (Democrat), of New York, was unprepared for the abrupt change in plans, Mrs. Norton decided to let the Sisson bill go over until the next District day and to dispose of minor legislation.

Besides the traffic act amendment, she called up and passed a beauty shop license bill and a boiler inspection measure. Although the lunacy commission bill is on the calendar, it was not brought up because of a misunderstanding.

The traffic act amendment previously had passed the Senate, so it now goes to the President. Although members previously had voiced half-hearted objections to the bill, no one opposed it on the floor yesterday.

Apparently these members, like the House District Committee, were taken unawares by the sudden change in House leaders' schedule.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer was jubilant upon learning the bill had passed the House.

"Last week 35 per cent of the speeding cases involved out-of-

Mrs. Speel Loses Envelope Holding $1,350 in Currnecy

Mrs. Virginia White Speel, Republican national committeewoman from the District, lost an envelope containing $1,350 in bills early yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Speel said she had dropped it somewhere between her apartment, at 1316 New Hampshire avenue northwest, and a downtown department store.

Shortly after 1 p. m. she placed the money in an envelope of the Second National Bank, tucked it firmly in her dress and drove to the department store. She had intended later to deposit it at the bank. She discovered the loss at the store.

"I can't understand it," she said last night, obviously agitated. "My granddaughter was with me. I don't see how it could have dropped without our noticing it. It is a great blow to me. I've suffered so many financial losses."

Denied White House Parley, Cripples Leave City for N. Y.

Refused a personal interview with President Roosevelt, 35 jobless crippled men and women delegates from the League of the Physically Handicapped who besieged WPA headquarters through the week-end, left Washington for New York last night.

They took the 8 o'clock train. They traveled in a special car to the station. The car was provided for them by the WPA. Undismayed by their failure to win their demands the delegates promised to return to Washington in a few weeks to make further demands.

They said that in the meantime they would prepare a petition to be sent to the President and a statistical study of their situation as suggested by Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator.

"By the time we can come down here again," Henry Friendman, spokesman for the delegation said, "Hopkins and the President will have received these papers. We will then be in a position to demand a 'yes-or-no' answer of our demands."

The decision to leave the city was taken in executive session of the delegation only a few minutes before their time at the hotel was to have expired. Their hotel bill was paid until 6 p. m. by the WPA.

An ultimatum by Allen Foresberger, assistant chief of the labor relations division of the WPA, that the group be at Union Station by 5:15 or the WPA would no longer "be responsible" for their transportation home, as promised them by Aubrey Williams, was ignored.

It was the second such ultimatum they refused to heed. In the afternoon Foresberger gave them ten

Borah Declares He'll Continue Old Guard War

Ohio Republicans Choose Between Idahoan, Taft in Primary Today.

By the Associated Press.

A declaration by Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, yesterday that he would continue to fight what he called the Republican "old guard," focused additional interest upon the test of the Senator's Presidential strength today in the key State of Ohio.

Presidential primaries in the Buckeye State today gave Republicans a choice between Borah and Robert A. Taft, son of the late President and Chief Justice, who is running as a "favorite son" with the backing of the regular party organization.

Simultaneous Democratic primaries found President Roosevelt opposed again by Henry Breckinridge, of New York, who was defeated by the Chief Executive in similar primaries in Pennsylvania and Maryland.

Back in Washington after a busy week of campaigning in Ohio, Borah told reporters yesterday that regardless of the outcome of the primaries or of the convention itself, he would keep "after the bunch" he previously had referred to as the "old guard."

"I am interested in issues and will fight for them both before and after the convention," he told reporters.

West Virginia Primary.

A Presidential primary was scheduled in West Virginia today also. Borah was opposed by Leo J. Chassee, of Milwaukee, Wis., in the Republican balloting for the State's preferential vote. President Roosevelt was opposed in the State's Democratic primary by Joseph A. Coutremarsh, of New Hampshire.

Senator M. M. Neely is running for renomination and West Virginia's junior Senator, Rush Holt, is opposing him and supporting Ralph M. Hiner, former Speaker of the House of Delegates.

The day's list, in addition, included Democratic State conventions in Delaware and North Dakota and a Republican convention in Vermont. Vermont Democrats will meet in convention Thursday, and Oregon Democrats on Friday. Both parties held State conventions in Wyoming yesterday.

Other political developments saw Chairman Farley of the Democratic National Committee claim all 48 States as "Roosevelt territory." He made this statement passing through Chicago to speak at the North Dakota convention today.

In addition, he advanced the "idea" that Republican charges of promise-breaking should be met with the following argument:

"President Roosevelt went into office nine months after the platform was written. In that time completely new conditions arose. What was he supposed to do, call a new convention and ask for a new platform? He had to act like a fire chief does—do what the emergency demands."

Counting on Labor Chiefs.

Farley also reported he was counting on the help of two labor leaders who have been battling each other—William Green and John L. Lewis—to help swing Pennsylvania behind the President.

Lewis, as chairman of the board of "Labor's Nonpartisan League," with George L. Berry, its president, yesterday called on the President and later issued a statement saying the organization was out to "contribute to the complete unmasking of the offensives of the Manufacturers Association, the Liberty League, the so-called Grass Roots Democrats of the South, or any other such organization formed to defeat the President."

"We sincerely hope," Berry and Lewis said in a statement, "there will be no question as to the motives and purposes of labor's nonpartisan league, because we want to identify definitely the fact that its sole objective is to re-elect Franklin Delano Roosevelt to the Presidency of the United States.

"That ought to be sufficiently clear to anyone who may be interested."

In Portland, Oreg., Col. Frank Knox, Republican Presidential candidate on a political tour of the Northwest, said yesterday that President Roosevelt, if re-elected, would bring about a much "different kind of a country" than Americans have been living in. The Chicago publisher said:

"Drunk With Power."

"The Administration is drunk with power and will be a lot drunker."

"The New Deal has produced confusion," Knox charged. "If, during the next four years, we can eliminate this confusion, keep what is good and throw away what is bad, then we shall retain the benefit of radical stimulation and perhaps be able to work out some real and lasting reform."

He said "after three years of the New Deal, there is still need for a change and reform—more, perhaps, than before the New Deal began.

"But reform should come as a result of careful and deliberate study by competent nonpartisan authorities. It should not come as it has under the New Deal, as the result of 'must legislation' driven through a rubber-stamp Congress by a willful Chief Executive a Chief Executive who apparently confuses mere activity, or change, with progress."

Politics and People

Roosevelt Plans Tour to Take Spotlight From G. O. P. Rally, if Congress Adjourns.

By Franklyn Waltman

APPARENTLY carried away by his feeling of self-confidence, President Roosevelt is planning one of the boldest steps he has yet taken, either in politics or administration.

WALTMAN

If Congress adjourns by June 1, Mr. Roosevelt intends to attempt to blanket the channels of publicity for the Republican National Convention.

Mr. Roosevelt—if Congress permits him—proposes to start out on an important speaking campaign into the Southwest about June 1. The tentative itinerary includes speeches at Memphis, Tenn.; at a mammoth picnic at Little Rock, Ark., and at the Texas Centennial Exposition at Dallas, Tex.

But that is not all. Turning northward, the President will speed to Vincennes, Ind., to dedicate the George Rogers Clark Memorial on the eve of the Republican meeting in nearby Cleveland. But, as the tentative schedule stands, Mr. Roosevelt, even then, has no intention of leaving the spotlight to the Republicans.

Plans are in a formative stage for the President to go to Ottawa on June 8 to pay a social visit on the Governor-General and the Prime Minister of Canada and also, it is whispered, to engage Canadian interest in an all-American neutrality program, which is expected to come to fruition later in the summer when the inter-American Conference sponsored by the United States is held at Buenos Aires.

There is no urgent reason why this schedule of Presidential addresses must be kept in June—indeed, unless Congress adjourns to free the President, it will not be. So the suspicion among some Republicans that the President deliberately is setting out to distract attention from and blanket the Cleveland convention seems plausible.

Assuming that is the reason, there is a question whether Mr. Roosevelt can get away with it. Instead of it being a piece of smart politics, this strategy may prove to be a boomerang and he may be the one whose publicity is blanketed.

In the first place, virtually all newspapers these days play the news according to its value and, even though a high news value attaches to anything the President may say or do, he would have to explode a bombshell or two to get the play over the Republican meeting with all its uncertainties and its elements for controversy.

Secondly, there is no doubt but that the Cleveland convention will be given a better "coverage." The first flight of Washington political writers will go to Cleveland, rather than with the President—although, if he is forced to defer his trip until later in the summer, they will be with him. But even at that, if the President's plans materialize, the press will have to contend with a two-ring circus and the country's attention will be divided.

The betting on Capitol Hill as to whether Congress will adjourn before the Republican convention, which meets June 9, is now about even. An effort is still being made to bring about adjournment on May 30, but even the Democratic leaders privately assert that they cannot see how they can finish the "must" program before June 6—at the best. So it is doubtful whether the President can embark on his bold speaking program.

Only two measures are regarded as "must" bills on Capitol Hill—the tax bill and the relief bill. The House has disposed of both, in its usual perfunctory manner. The Senate, however, is expected to follow a more deliberative and searching course—as its Finance Committee is now doing with the measure to tax undistributed corporation earnings.

Neither the relief nor the tax bill is expected to be taken up for debate in the Senate this week, although the relief measure might be reported before the week ends. In all probability, the Senate will spend at least a week apiece on these two bills, so, without allowance for unexpected delays, June 1 would be here without the passage of these bills. Of course, additional time would be needed for reconciling differences in the House and Senate versions of the measures.

Through the force of public opinion, the Administration very definitely has been put on the defensive in respect to its tax bill. It was George O. May, the well-known and able accountant, who riddled the measure and the Treasury estimates on which it is based. He was preceded, however, by an able group of opponents, who helped in chilling the Finance Committee's enthusiasm for the measure.

At the moment the Administration leaders are seeking to prevent action on the tax bill, since they apparently know that a majority of the Finance Committee is opposed to it. Chairman Pat Harrison blocked a vote on the measure by his committee, pleading that before Senators closed their minds Treasury authorities be given an additional hearing. The fate of the bill at this time is in doubt. If it is thrown overboard, Congress could adjourn with ease by June 1.

Speaking before the Connecticut Democratic State Convention the other night, Postmaster General James A. Farley—in his capacity ac chairman of the Democratic National Committee—undertook to defend the New Deal relief program against "boondoggling" charges. Finally, he dismissed the entire subject with the words: "But, as I say, what do these fly specks on the fair canvas on which a statesman has inscribed a wonderful recovery for a shaken people amount to, anyway?"

To hear Mr. Farley boast about the Roosevelt recovery one would never suspent that the country had an unemployed army of 10,000,000 persons. But perhaps he regards them as nothing more than "fly specks" on the fair canvas of recovery.

War Zone Ship Denied by U.S., Hull Discloses

Sending of Vessel to Aid Americans in Ethiopia Weighed, He Says.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday revealed that in August, 1935, the Government had studied the advisability of sending a battleship to the Rea Sea to protect American citizens on the outbreak of Italo-Ethiopian hostilities.

This disclosure came in a letter to Chairman Sam D. McReynolds (Democrat), Texas, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, in answer to a resolution by Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), Massachusetts, asking information on all steps taken to safeguard American citizens and the American Legation in Addis Ababa, and copies of all correspondence between the State Department and the legation.

Mrs. Rogers severely criticized the department for what she called insufficient protection of American citizens during the attacks on the legation by Ethiopian natives. She also said it was "humiliating" that Americans had to rely on the British Legation for protection.

Detailed Warnings.

In vigorous rebuttal of the charges, Secretary Hull's letter detailed, step by step, the long series of warnings to American citizens to evacuate the territory, the many measures considered and taken by the department to establish protection, and the reasons behind each action.

A few hours before the letter was sent to the House of Representatives, President Roosevelt had sent to the Senate formal recommendations for the promotion of the American resident minister, Cornelius Van H. Engert, and his staff members for their bravery in defense of the legation.

Secretary Hull listed in a lengthy statement the steps taken as follows:

In May, 1935, after consultation with the British foreign office, the department instructed the American Charge d'Affaires at Addis Ababa to consult with the hundred-odd missionaries in Ethiopia and report the earliest date on which they could evacuate. The American Legation consisted of three Americans, unmarried, at that time.

Immediate Evacuation.

On June 29, 1935, the charge reported that he had recommended an immediate evacuation by missionaries of all outlying posts.

On July 2, 1935, the department asked the charge to urge all missionaries to leave and addressed letters to all home boards of missions in the United States urging them to withdraw their personnel from Ethiopia.

On July 6, 1935, the charge reported he had advised all the missionaries, but that lack of funds was holding up a number of withdrawals. The department urged home mission boards to supply such funds. The charge secured a promise from Emperor Haile Selassie to protect Americans in all possible ways.

Late in July, 1935, the British government asked permission of the Ethiopian government to bring in an Indian regiment for added protection. This was refused. The British brought them in anyway, with arms, ammunition and supplies, on September 7. The French brought troops to Dire Dawa on October 6.

The charge requested additional arms and ammunition on January 20, 1936, with the total, after this shipment, amounting to 10 rifles, 10 revolvers, 1,000 rifle cartridges, 1,500 pistol cartridges, and 4 bayonets. Machine guns, it was reported, would have been difficult to get through, "even if requested," because of the Ethiopian government's unwillingness to allow such shipments.

Relied on Native Guards.

The Secretary then pointed out that the United States had no long-standing right by usage or sufferance to maintain legation guards in Addis Ababa, and relied on native guards as did all other legations there except the British, French and Italian missions, all of which have extensive interests in Ethiopia.

In discussing the possible dispatch of a battleship to the trouble zone, the Secretary pointed out the reasons for the veto, as follows:

"* * * In view of the tension existing there at the time the plan was abandoned. * * * In connection with the suggestion that American armed forces might have been sent to Ethiopia, * * * it seems unnecessary to recall the state of public opinion in this country during the summer of 1935, which resulted in the passage of the neutrality resolution, specifically designed to prevent this country's being dragged into any foreign conflict. The dispatch of an American war vessel carrying American troops to a distant, troubled zone at such a time and for such a limited purpose would have subjected this Government to a charge of flagrantly violating the spirit of the neutrality act, and would undoubtedly and rightfully have met with vigorous protest from the American people."

Other steps taken included the construction of a bombproof shelter, establishment of a naval radio station, painting of American flags on American buildings and advisement of Italians of location of American institutions. Secretary Hull stressed the repeated warnings given all Americans, including the President's statement of October 5, 1935.

Azana Takes Over Spain's Presidency

Madrid, May 11 (AP).—Manuel Azana took the oath of office as President of Spain today in the Parliament Building, where less than a year ago he defended himself against charges of helping foment the 1934 revolution.

After the inauguration, Azana proceeded to his new home—the Presidential Palace. A huge crowd gathered outside the former royal residence as the new President appeared on a balcony where Alfonso XIII used to greet his subjects.

The day passed peacefully. Every effort was made to give the ceremony imposing dignity. The Parliamentary building was heavily guarded throughout the day and only those carrying special invitations were permitted to pass police lines, formed for four blocks around the building.

Azana, premier following the Leftist victory in February, was chosen President yesterday by a vote of the Cortes (Parliament) and a similar number of presidential electors. He succeeds Niceto Alcala Zamora, ousted by the Leftist majority of the Cortes, which repeatedly accused him of being "reactionary."

Railroads Ask Repeal of Law On Short Hauls

J. G. Kerr Tells I. C. C. Carriers Ought to Be Given Responsibility.

By the Associated Press.

Repeal of the long and short haul section of the interstate commerce act was advocated before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday by Joseph G. Kerr, of the traffic department of the Association of American Railroads.

His testimony was given as the committee considered the House-approved Pettengill bill to amend the act to relax the long and short haul clause which prohibits railroads from charging a lower rate for a long haul than for a short one over the same route in the same direction.

Kerr said the association asked "that the long-and-short haul clause be eliminated entirely, thus leaving to the carrier the primary duty of determining and making effective whatever rates are necessary to meet and to fairly reflect the circumstances and conditions surrounding the movement of the particular traffic, and without the necessity of waiting until our competitors have virtually stripped the traffic from the rails and also from the producers in the land-locked interior, largely depending upon railroad transportation, before we can make an application to the Interstate Commerce Commission, and then to spend much time, expense and labor preparing fourth section applications, participating in elaborate formal hearings in relation thereto, and wait months and in important instances years before we can get a decision as to what we can or what we can not do."

"It is difficult for us to conceive," Kerr continued, "of the justness of any law or the administratioin of it, which says, in practical effect, that the railroads shall not be permitted to make rates which will enable them to get more than a few crumbs from the table, even though such rates yield them some profit, unless they are willing to accept substantially the same measure of profit on all the traffic that they handle. The latter is manifestly impossible because it would be ruinous from a revenue standpoint. No other form of transportation and no other kind of business is so handicapped in adjusting its charges to meet the conditions with which they are confronted."

R. V. Fletcher, the association's general counsel, told the committee that under the proposed Pettengill amendment railroads could file a suggested change in rates with the Interstate Commerce Commission subject to suspension within 30 days if the commission thought fit and if objections were raised. In these cases a hearing would be called and the issue thrashed out.

He said, too, that should shippers complain after the 30-day period the I. C. C. would be obliged to hold a hearing.

Coroner Holds Taxicab Driver In Girl Slaying

Carl Loveridge, 29, to Face Grand Jury in Death of Jessie Posey.

Carl Loveridge, 29, a taxicab driver, was held for the action of the grand jury yesterday after an inquest into the fatal shootnig May 1 of Miss Jessie Posey, 24, of 244 Ninth street southeast.

Miss Posey died in Casualty Hospital, shortly after her arrival, from a bullet wound in the head. She was shot in front of her home after she had returned there with Howard A. Brooks, a friend.

Loveridge, who lives in the 1200 block N street northwest, was arrested by Fifth Precinct police about an hour after the shooting at Eleventh street and Potomac avenue southeast. A .32 caliber revolver, with one shot fired, was found in his pocket.

James Rossier, stepfather of the dead girl, testified that he was near the door and heard Jessie say:

"Carl, please don't do it!"

Rossier continued that his daughter was running toward the house when he heard her call out. As she reached the front gate, the witness said, she screamed "Mother." A second later the shot rang out.

Loveridge ran from behind the cab toward the house and looked like he was going to fire another shot, Rossier testified, but he jumped into the automobile and sped away.

Brooks, who lives at 634 Maryland avenue southwest, and is a filling station attendant, told the jury he had trouble with Loveridge, who resented his going out with Miss Posey.

Questioned by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, Brooks admitted that at one time Loveridge had shot at him. Brooks said "he missed, so it didn't count."

Brooks said he had driven Miss Posey home before the shooting but had left the scene before Loveridge arrived.

Police who arrested Loveridge testified that the man was not drunk, although Detective Sergt. John C. Dalglish told the coroner that Loveridge was extremely nervous the next day, a condition that might have been caused by excessive drinking.

Carrying out the plans to pay tribute to the work in Palestine of Miss Henrietta Szold, an ardent supporter of the work of Hadassah, the Seaboard Hadassah Regional Conference was held today, as was that of the junior unit.

Mrs. Philip Kroskin, president of the Norfolk Chapter of Hadassah, extended greetings to those in attendance. Speakers included Miss Marion Coplon, of the junior unit, and Rabbi Edward L. Israel, of Baltimore, who was re-elected as national president of the Seaboard Zionist Region; Morris Rothenberg, national president of the Zionists, and Mendel N. Fisher, of the United Palestine Appeal.

Eckener Received at White House

President Roosevelt greets Dr. Hugo Eckener, head of the Zeppelin company, builders of the giant airship Hindenburg. Dr. Eckener visited the White House during a round of official calls here yesterday. On the President's left is Dr. Hans Luther, the German Ambassador. Capt. Ernst Lehman, commander of the Hindenburg, is shown at right.

Eckener Talks to Roosevelt, Navy Flies Him Back to N. Y.

Dirigible Designer Tells President of Trip of Hindenburg, Is Honor Guest at German Embassy Luncheon During 8-Hour Stay.

Dr. Hugo Eckener left Washington in a Navy transport plane late yesterday after a crowded eight hours here, during which he was received by President Roosevelt, visited the State, Navy, Postoffice and Commerce departments and was guest of honor at a German Embassy luncheon.

Lieut. John G. Crommelin, jr., was at the controls of the big Douglas that flew the famed Zeppelin mentor back to Lakehurst, N. J., for the Hindenburg's return rip to Germany. The plane took off at Naval Air Station at 3:45 p. m.

The return party included Capt. Ernst Lehman, commander of the Zepellin Hindenburg; Wilhelm von Meister, American representative of the Zeppelin Corporation and Commander Garland Fulton, of the Bureau of Naval Aeronautics.

Dr. Eckener and Capt. Lehmann were continuously surrounded by admirers representing both the German and American governments from the time of their early arrival yesterday at Union Station until their departure.

Tells President of Trip.

At the White House Dr. Eckener told the President about the Hindenburg's record-breaking maiden flight across the North Atlantic and gave his impressions of the future of transoceanic lighter-than-air travel. He was accompanied by Ambassador Hans Luther.

The party, which made the official rounds also included Herr von Meister and Lieut. Gen. Friedrich von Boetticher, military and air attache of the German Embassy.

At the Navy Department, Dr. Eckener told reporters he did not think the Hindenburg would attempt to break the airship record for the West-to-East crossing. He diplomatically evaded questions about German politics—the dirigible wizard is reported to have incurred the displeasure of Der Fuehrer recently—and was equally reticent to discuss the possible use of the Hindenburg as a war instrument.

Among the first to pay him their respects yesterday were Eugene L. Vidal, director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, and Amelia Earhart, the flier. They called on Dr. Eckener at the Willard Hotel.

Studies Weather Data.

In the forenoon Dr. Eckner and Capt. Lehmann visited Acting Secretary of the Navy William H. Standley and other ranking Navy officials; Secretary of State Hull and Secretary of Commerce Roper, and Assistant Postmaster General Harllee Branch. Postmaster General Farley was out of the city.

Following the White House reception shortly after noon, the master minds of the world's largest dirigible were honored at luncheon by Ambassador Luther. But before sitting down to the table, Dr. Eckener studiously went over weather maps with Federal experts as a preliminary to the return flight of the airship.

Among those at the luncheon were Secretary Roper and Assistant Secretary Johnson of the Department of Commerce, Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore, Commander C. E. Rosendahl, America's ace dirigible commander; Assistant Postmasters General Branch and Howes, Admiral Standley, Eugene L. Vidal and Read Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of the Bureau of Naval Aeronautics.

town drivers," he said. "Under the measure just passed we will have authority to treat nonresident offenders the same as Washingtonians."

Van Duzer has received assurances of co-operation from Maryland and Virginia officials, but a county court in Maryland has held that the proposed law cannot be enforced.

The bill amends section 13 (c) of the traffic act of 1925 to read as follows:

"The Commissioners of the District of Columbia, or their designated agent, may suspend or revoke the right of any nonresident as defined in section 8 (title 6, section 234 (a), D. C. Code, to operate a motor vehicle in the District of Columbia, for any cause they or their agent may deem sufficient, and the proper authority at the place of the issuance of the permit, or other authority to operate a motor vehicle, shall be notified of such suspension and the reason therefor, immediately:

Subject to Appeal.

"Provided, That such order of suspension or revocation shall take effect ten days after its issuance, and the same be subject to review and appeal in the manner and under the same conditions as are provided for such matters in section 13(a), title 6, section 250(a) D. C. Code."

The beauty shop bill, which has been pending before the committee for some months, provides for the examination and registration of all District beauticians.

The only objection voiced to the bill came from Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, yesterday. He insisted that the license fees would work a hardship on employes. The measure has not been considered in the Senate.

The third bill, which has passed the Senate, provides for the inspection, control, and regulation of steam boilers and unfired pressure vessels in the District. It is designed to replace a statute that dates back to 1878.

"then perhaps I'll go to study the conditions."

The veteran designer and operator of Zeppelins declined to discuss their military value. He said that territory around Alexandria, Va., in the Hybla Valley section, would be suitable for a commercial Zeppelin airport near Washington.

Both Dr. Eckener and Capt. Ernst A. Lehmann, the ship's commanding officer, said the weather ahead for the eastward crossing appeared satisfactory.

All station officers interpreted a special midafternoon Weather Bureau forecast as being "very favorable" for the flight, with the possibility tail winds would mean a "help of 10 or 15 knots."

The Hindenburg passengers, arriving at intervals during the day and evening, were a happly lot. Most of them said they were making the ocean crossing on the ship for the thrill it would afford.

Lieut. Comdr. J. M. Thornton and Lieut. H. T. Orville, United States Navy, were aboard the Hindenburg as official observers for the Navy Department.

Witness Won't Talk; Falls Dead on Stand

White Plains, N. Y., May 11 (U.P.). Thomas J. Smith is suing the Westchester County Park Commission for $60,000, alleging he and his daughter, Anna, 11, were injured when frightened by a skeleton in the "Chamber of Horrors," at Playland, an amusement park owned by the commission.

Today Frederick A. Church, superintendent of Playland, was called as a witness. He objected to the questions put to him by Edward Long, attorney for the plaintiff, saying:

"I won't answers those questions."

The court instructed him to answer. Still Church was silent. The attorney, angry, stepped toward the witness box.

Church was dead from a heart attack.

Says Orchestra Leader Has "Ill Temper;" Financial Accord Reached.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, May 11.—Fay Webb Vallee sued her estranged husband, Rudy Vallee, for divorce today, charging her health was impaired and her peace of mind shattered because of the orchestra leader's "ungovernable temper," aloofness and the kind of life he insisted that she lead.

The action brought to a climax the tangled skein of litigation with which the Vallees have enmeshed each other since their marital troubles became open court subjects in 1933.

Vallee, his wife declared in her complaint, was "very temperamental, constantly irritated and annoyed."

"Upon occasions of great emotional outbursts," the complaint continued, "the defendant would unnecessarily criticize and deride the plaintiff and engage in acrimonious discussions over trivial things."

At times, the orchestra leader exhibited an "ungovernable temper," Mrs. Vallee charged, and would then "embarrass the plaintiff by rudeness and insolence."

Shortly after the Vallees were married, July 6, 1931, Vallee insisted she accompany him upon orchestra tours, the complaint set forth.

Under this sort of treatment and because of the design for living he sought to impose upon her, Mrs. Vallee alleged, she languished, losing weight, becoming ill and suffering disturbance of her peace of mind.

Ben C. Cohen, counsel for Mrs. Vallee, said that recently "the Vallees satisfactorily and amicably adjusted their financial affairs."

The divore action almost coincided with dropping of Mrs. Vallee's appeal from a New York City Supreme Court decision refusing her petition for more support money from Vallee.

Cohen said his client will continue to get $100 a week under an agreement signed in 1933, and that "in addition a supplemental agreement has been entered into by plaintiff and defendant whereby defendant agrees to pay her certain sums."

Cohen declined to disclose the amount of the "certain sums."

Countess Loses Appeal on D. C. Sentence Law

Court Upholds Legality of 'Indeterminate Term' in Theft Case.

In its first direct ruling on the legality of the District's "indeterminate sentence law" the United States Court of Appeals yesterday disposed of the question in a decision that sustained in all points, the act of Congress enabling justices of District Supreme Court to impose maximum and minimum sentences.

The question arose in the appeal of Countess Grace de Benque, who sought her freedom from a 15 months sentence on the ground that she had been illegally sentenced after the term of court in which she was tried had expired, and could not, therefore, be lawfully resentenced.

The countess was originally sentenced to serve from two to four years. After serving approximately 25 months, she obtained temporary freedom by challenging the legality of the indeterminate law. However, Justice Joseph W. Cox, before whom she was tried, held that since his original sentence was admittedly invalid, she had in law, never been sentenced and he thereupon gave her a 15 months sentence to round out his original plan.

In its opinion yesterday the Appellate Court ruled that the law was valid and that the 15 months sentence would have to be served. Countess de Benque was convicted, with George Gormley, of stealing more than 5,000 from Louise Maret, co-proprietor of a fashionable school on Kalorama road. Gormley is serving his sentence in Lorton and Countess de Benque is at Occoquan.

The entire question yesterday revolved about the right of the District Supreme Court to reimpose sentence after the original sentence had been declared invalid.

Campaign Aid From Business Asked by Roper

Nation's Leaders Urged Over Radio to Avoid 'Vituperation.'

In a further Administration effort to bridge the gap between the New Deal and the business men of the Nation, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper last night appealed to business leaders to avoid "vituperation" in the coming Presidential campaign.

The Secretary's address over the radio, which had been approved by the White House, directly followed numerous signs of a tendency of the Administration to get together with business leaders in a co-operative attempt to lift the country the rest of the way out of the economic pit.

Walter P. Chrysler, Owen D. Young, Bernard M. Baruch, Walter C. Teagle, Gerard Swope and others have been recent White House visitors, the President said last week, in consultations on means to stimulate employment by encouraging durable goods industries.

Secretary Roper challenged critics of the Administration to furnish "a bill of particulars" in their criticisms of "Government competition with private industry." He said:

"True issues are obscured by unsupported generalizations. There have been claims of the deterrent effects of Government competition in certain industries, but there must be an inconsistency in such claims when such industries register remarkable gains and improvements.

Suffer Loss.

"It is destructive to masquerade such objections behind the cloak of generalized attacks which charge that un-American or un-democratic principles and objectives motivate in any way procedures in the operations of the National Government.

"If business men do countenance efforts of this nature, their leadership will suffer a severe loss of prestige before the jury of informed public opinion.

Stating that instead of signs of a prospective lag in business between now and the November elections there were definite indications that further recovery gains would be made, the Secretary said:

"Nothing would be more detrimental to the best interest of the country and of business than the adoption of the recommendation of some few people that all business should support one political party.

"I believe that it is not in accordance with the tested practices of our democratic system to have any one of our dominant economic groups concentrated in support of one political party. A representative cross-section of the major economic groups in both parties gives strength to the political system.

"Lead to Disruption."

"Any other course would doubtless lead to disruptive and destructive segmentary and sectional action. It might eventually lead to the overthrow of our democratic form of government."

Speaking of the need for teamwork between business and government, after "a century of traditional experience in which business and government have not been called upon for any extensive co-operative action," he continued:

"In a baseball team it may take two or three years for a group of individual stars to become a smoothly functioning pennant winner. Business and government are now partners and good results require teamwork.

"There are new encouraging evidences of constructive developments in this direction. These co-operative gains must be safeguarded and during the coming campaign business should discourage all efforts to create unjustifiable political friction which will complicate the process of working out the problems which still confront us."

The Secretary promised that the Administration would as swiftly as possible transfer the relief load to local agencies; would balance the budget as emergency efforts were discontinued, and would preserve the profit system while studying the problems of corporate "bigness."

Neuritis, Meningitis, Ataxia Reported Cured by New Device

Ailments Relieved, in Some Cases With 100% Recovery, by Newly Applied Hot Air Fever Equipment; Demonstrated Before Medical Asso.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, May 11.—Neuritis, locomotor ataxia and meningitis are relieved—in some cases with 100 per cent recovery—by a newly applied hot-air fever equipment shown in the scientific exhibit of the American Medical Association here today.

All the pains of neuritis were reported immediately relieved, although in some types the relief was temporary. The paralyzing effects of locomotor ataxia disappeared in 62 per cent of the cases shown. For meningitis epidemics of all sorts the hot-air treatment was indicated as a valuable new aid to present methods.

These experiments which project this hot-air treatment into three new fields of disease were exhibited by Drs. A. E. Bennett, C. A. Owens, Bruce Austin and Paul Person, of the University of Nebraska College of Medicine and the Lutheran Hospital. They used the apparatus made by Charles F. Kettering, a box in which the air is heated by electricity. A person in the box gets artificial fever or elevated temperature, which can be controlled within a fraction of a degree.

The Nebraska University studies are one of 24 conducted with this new apparatus throughout the United States.

The treatment for neuritis was three to six periods in the box, for four hours each, with fevers rising to 103 or 104 degrees.

Twenty-four human patients were tried. Some of these had failed to be relieved of pain even by large doses of morphine. The heat stopped all pain.

The exhibitors reported that locomotor ataxia showed better results from the fever box than from any of the standard treatments. Of 14 persons 70 per cent were relieved of pain and gastric symptoms. Five out of eight were relieved of paralytic troubles.

The fever treatment has been used on one human case of meningitis. The patient apparently recovered completely.

The Nation's physicians were warned here today that unless such pressing problems as hospitalization of the poor are solved independently they face the possibility of an early attempt at Government control of medicine.

Dr. James S. McLester, of Birmingham, Ala., president of the association, said the "danger" for the moment has been averted although there have been times during the past two years when it appeared that disaster was just ahead."

Low-Priced Opera Jams Metropolitan

New York, May 11 (AP).—With a sold-out house, the Metropolitan Opera opened its first popular-priced season tonight.

It was a strange opening night for the world-renowned Metropolitan. The boxes of the "Golden Horseshoe"—where sit the Morgans, the Astors and the Vanderbilts—in the fashionable winter season—were filled with the socially-unknown in plain dress and, more strangely, the boxes were all filled long before the curtain went up on Bizet's tragic opera of Spanish dancers, bullfighters and smugglers, "Carmen."

There was none of the trappings of other opening nights—the gems and new Paris creations, the promenade of Park and Fifth avenues.

It seemed as if the music lovers had taken the Met away from society.

The prices were 25 cents to $3, and the house was packed from the orchestra to the last balcony row with several hundred stand-uppers. Even the first line critics came for the Metropolitan's first offering of the lyric drama at popular prices.

In the title role tonight was Bruna Castagna, the mezzo-soprano from La Scala in Milan, who first came to New York two years ago to sing this opera at the Hippodrome.

County Unit Opens Own Chest Drive

Because an estimated $100,000 goes every year into Washington's Community Chest from residents of Montgomery County who work in Washington, the Montgomery County Civic Association last night started a drive to collect some of that money for their own Community Chest.

The association also adopted resolutions calling upon the State roads commission for improvement of highways in the county.

OxnamLeading In Bishop Race On First Ballot

Methodist Episcopal Conference Continues Vote as Two Withdraw.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, May 11.—The tradition which carried three of the last four presidents of Depauw University to seats on the Methodist Episcopal board of bishops helped Dr. G. Bromley Oxnam into first place today as general conference delegates counted their initial ballots for four new bishops.

Dr. Oxnam, present head of the Greencastle, Ind., Methodist University, received 203 votes, more than a third short of the two-thirds majority necessary for election.

In second place was Dr. Wilbur E. Hammaker, Youngstown, Ohio, minister, who had 128 votes on the first ballot.

Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, chancellor of the American University at Washington, who was third with 108 votes, and Dr. Lewis O. Hartman, of Boston, editor of Zion's Herald, who was fourth with 96 votes, both asked to withdraw their names.

Three members of the Methodist board of bishops, two of them still active, stepped from the presidency of Depauw into seats as bishops of the church. They were Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, of Washington, senior Methodist bishop in the United States; Bishop Francis J. McConnell, of New York, Liberal leader of the church, and Bishop George Grose, who retired some years ago after serving in China.

A second vote was taken immediately, with leaders predicting that it would result in the election of at least one of the three white bishops, and possibly of one Negro.

Oxnam is a leader among church Liberals, who demonstrated their strength on the conference floor today by defeating a resolution for selection of an official body to speak for the church on social, economic and political questions.

Mexican Labor Leaders to See William Green

Heads of New Insurgent Group Confer With Secretary Perkins.

Four representatives of the Confederation of Mexican Workers will call at the office of William Green, American Federation of Labor president, today, their second stop in Washington on a "good-will" tour.

Yesterday they paid a "courtesy call" on Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor.

Explaining that they were in this country mrly to stablish friendly relations with American labor organizations and workers, the four representatives will tour the country speaking on behalf of their organization.

Members of the delegation are: Victor Manuel Vallasener, Alejandro Carillo, both members of the international affairs committee of the organization; Eduardo S. Innes, general secretary of Oil Workers of Mexico, and Agustin Guzman 5th, general secretary of Mine Workers of Mexico.

Their organization has been the hub of recent political disputes in Mexico. Founded only last February, the confederation has 533,400 members in Mexico. It was organized, confederation leaders said here yesterday, to combat alleged corruption in Mexico's other labor organization, the Mexican Federation of Labor. The federation, as against the new confederation, now has only 12,000 members, the representatives of the confederation claimed.

They allege corruption on the part of the officials of the federation made working conditions for the laborers unbearable while the old federation was dominant in Mexico. They said the old federation suppressed strikes, and that the leaders pocketed organization money and thus made personal fortunes. The old Federation, or Crom, was government-sponsored.

Passaic Mayor Made Manager Of Quadruplets

Accepts Offer of Financial Aid; Babies Rally After Sinking Spell.

By the Associated Press.

Passaic, N. J., May 11.—Mayor Benjamin F. Turner tonight became business manager of the New Jersey quadruplets, Frances, Frank, Ferdinand and Felix Kasper, born three days ago in St. Mary's Hospital.

In the presence of Dr. Frank F. Jani, who delivered the babies Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Kasper signed papers designating Mayor Turner as business manager for their four children.

The mayor said no offer to exhibit the children had been considered, but said he had accepted the offer of a San Francisco woman of $500 with which to purchase necessities for the babies, and $100 a month with which to pay the Kasper family's rent.

Turner said the offer was made in a telegram from Mrs. Edmond E. Herrscher, San Francisco.

The quadruplets went on a milk diet today after rallying quickly from a sinking spell which had St. Mary's Hospital a bit worried for a while.

Encouraging was not the word, however, for the immediate outlook as far as State aid for the babies was concerned. Through Mayor Turner, Gov. Harold G. Hoffman wired congratulations to the parents, but said there was no existing State law which would authorize State guardianship for the children.

Kasper, a $22-a-week railroad roundhouse worker, visited his wife at the hospital during the day. He had the couple's two other children, Ellen, 3, and Ralph, 1½, found her doing nicely and well on the way to recovery.

The quadruplets took a turn for the worse in the forenoon, running sub-normal temperatures and losing their healthy color. Dr. Jani was notified and immediately ordered human milk for his small patients. Previously they had been fed a diet of water, whisky and glucose from an eye dropper. While some milk was obtained locally an additional 10-ounce supply was started here from a New York dispensary. The babies recovered from their sinking spell and regained their previous condition.

San Francisco, May 11 (AP).—Edmond E. Herrscher, who with his wife gave $500 to te Kasper quadruplets and arranged $100 monthly for the family's rent, said tonight they wanted the Passaic (N. J.) family to have a decent home together.

"My wife and I talked it over and decided that the babies should have a decent home and that the whole family should be kept together—not separated, as was the case with the Dionne children," explained Merrscher, wealthy and socially prominent attorney.

"Mrs. Herrscher felt it would be a terrible thing for the mother to have her children taken from her just because the family could not care for them properly.

"So we decided to help, and that's all there is to it."

Senator Trammell, who had been Florida's junior Senator since 1917, died Friday at Washington.

A Baptist pastor, the Rev. James S. Day, jr., who delivered a eulogy, referred to the huge naval supply bill passed last week as the "crowning achievement" of Senator Trammell, who was chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee.

"Congress passed the largest naval appropriation in peacetime history of this country in order that we might have an adequate Navy," he declared, "because Park Trammel hated war."

Both Houses of Congress adjourned yesterday as funeral services were held in Lakeland, Fla., for Senator Park Trammell, who died here Friday.

New Members Sought by Unit To Aid Children

Society Begins Campaign With Letter Appeals to 2,500 in D. C.

A drive for a larger membership for the Crippled Children Society of the District began yesterday when 2,500 letters were sent to prominent men and women here inviting them to join the society.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, chairman of the campaign committee, has announced that those joining the society will be aiding the extensive survey which is being planned to discover and remedy the physical, social and educational problems of the crippled child in the District.

"So many parents believe that their children are beyond all help," Mrs. Wiley says. Quoting an actual case, Mrs. Wiley told how recently a mother brought her young daughter to a clinic. Since birth the child had suffered from a weak leg. The mother had almost given up hope. A doctor was called, physeotherapy at the Children's Hospital was begun and a period of care at the Children's Country Home was provided. As a result, the girl will be able to enter school next year.

Mrs. Wiley urged everyone to send in the names of all afflicted children that they might know of the Crippled-Children Society, Weightman School, Twenty-third and M streets northwest.

The society was organized in 1933 and is headed by Mrs. Cary T. Grayson. Other officers are Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, first vice president; Edwin F. Hill, second vice president; Miss Agnes Shands, recording secretary; H. C. Corpening, corresponding secretary, and James C. Dulin, jr., treasurer.

Bus Rerouting To Ease Traffic At Tenth and E

P. U. C. Orders Change; Date Not Announced; Notice Will Be Given.

Rerouting several bus lines to relieve congestion in the neighborhood of Tenth and E streets northwest was decided on by the Public Utilities Commission yesterday.

Bus lines which will be affected include the Hyattsville, Takoma Park express, Foxhall Village, Potomac Heights, Montgomery County, Md., line of the Capital Transit Co., and routes seven and eight of the Chevy Chase line.

These are to be brought down Thirteenth street to Pennsylvania avenue to make a loop about the Archives Building, which is to become something of a bus loading center.

A change also is to be made in the downtown terminus of the Chevy Chase-Eleventh street loop line so as to avoid the present left-hand turn at Ninth and E streets northwest. Buses are to go to Pennsylvania avenue and turn around the Pennsylvania avenue loop at Seventh street.

Notice is to be given the public prior to effective date of the changes, it was said.

Monroe street northeast should be made a one-way street for buses, William A. Roberts, People's Counsel, said in a petition filed yesterday with the commission on behalf of residents of the street.

Either Lawrence or Newton street could be used by the buses on the return from the center of the city, Roberts said.

A hearing held by the commission in the past on the proposal did not meet requirements of law, Roberts said. The commission rejected the proposal.

Blum Requests Reds to Accept Posts in Cabinet

French Labor Confederation Also Asked to Participate in Government.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 11.—The General Confederation of Labor and the Communist Party were invited tonight to take posts in the new French cabinet.

The invitations came from the executive committee of the Socialist Party, acting under President Leon Blum, who has announced he will become premier in the new government, which takes office June 1.

The Labor Confederation, receiving such a request for the first time, called a meeting of its national committee to discuss the proposal next Monday. Jacques Duclos, Communist leader, previously had announced his party would support the new Leftist government, but would not participate in the cabinet.

(The Socialist National Council approved a resolution Sunday appealing to all the Leftist groups to keep faith with the People's Front coalition and to collaborate in the new cabinet.)

The bourse reacted favorably today. Bank of France shares, rentes and other domestic issues gained. International stocks continued somewhat irregular.

The conservative newspaper Le Temps praised the Socialist leader for his efforts to avoid upsetting the financial balance.

"M. Blum recognizes," the newspaper said, "that it is necessary to maintain a strong financial policy and that sound finances are not obtained by frightening people.

"His speech yesterday (when he announced he would accept the premiership) showed a sincere gesture toward confidence and reassurance."

Students of Music To Present Recital

A group of the young musicians will play for the first time on the accordion Liszt's second "Hungarian Rhapsody," Offenbach's overture to "Orphee aux Enfers," Suppe's "Light Cavalry" overture, Ponchielli's "Dance of the Hours," Lavallee's "Butterfly," Paderewski's "Minuet a l'Antique," and Sinding's "Rustle of Spring."

P. U. C. Acts to Cut Rates on Teletype

Reduction in rates charged the District for Police Department teletype machines was forecast by the Public Utilities Commission yesterday when it invited the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. to file new rates.

Action of the commission was taken at the instance of Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, following a study of the present charges by a special committee, composed of Walter E. Kern, District electrical engineer; B. M. Bachmann, chief accountant of the commission, and William A. Roberts, people's counsel.

A rental charge of $30 a month now is made. This is the same rate for which the service will be given private users. The District owns its own cables and does its own maintenance work to a large extent. A reduction of as much as $10 is expected to be insisted on.

P. U. C. Sets New Rate For Wholesale Power

A new wholesale electric power rate schedule, for large consumers, was approved by the Public Utilities Commission yesterday. It is based on the present commercial rate but is a complicated structure, the rate depending on the amount of current used, the time of day and year.

The rate is intended for consumers who do not steadily use Potomac Electric Power Co. current, but who want such current available when needed. The rate goes down if current is used when there is not much demand from regular customers and goes up during peak demand periods.

The District sewage disposal plant, the Dalecarlia reservoir, and the Navy Yard are most affected by the schedule, submitted for their criticism prior to approval by the commission.

Pay Rise Ends Greek's Strike After Disorder

Premier Metaxas Settles Dispute With Pledge of Labor Clemency.

By the Associated Press.

Athens, May 11.—Premier John Metaxas succeeded tonight in settling a strike of tobacco workers at Salonika which spread into a general strike and threatened a food shortage.

An official source announced the workers and their employers had reached an agreement providing for salary increases of between 20 and 30 per cent.

The government will show clemency, it was reported, to strikers who participated in mass meetings and resulted in troops being called out to disperse the crowds.

The workers are to return to their jobs after Wednesday.

The troops charged the strike meetings after army orders to return to their tasks had been disregarded.

At Salonika, where more than a score of tobacco strikers were killed Saturday and 250 wounded, police, firing blank cartridges, dispersed a meeting of strikers. They used the same tactics also in the suburbs, and began a general round-up of labor and strike leaders.

Newspapers did not publish and most traffic was halted. A few street cars were operated with the aid of soldiers. Public meetings were forbidden.

Four warships were en route to Salonika, dispatched there by the government to aid large forces of troops in maintaining order.

There were minor disorders in Athens and Piraeus when police broke up meetings.

Gen. Metaxas, who became premier only recently, asserted the strikes were due to "political motives." G. Logothetis, minister of justice, resigned from the cabinet in a disagreement with other ministers, presumbably over the way the strike was being handled.

League Rebuffs Italy

plored the League not to recognize Italy's "outrageous aggression."

The Ethiopian delegate told the council that his country had been faithful to the Covenant, had broken no laws and left her case in the hands of the council.

British circles said they saw three reasons for a new rallying around what heretofore has been described in many quarters as purely a British policy of insisting on sanctions. These reasons were listed as:

1. General anxiety for the future of the League, with the realization that the worst thing to do in the present crisis would be to recognize Il Duce's annexation decree and to abolish sanctions.

2. Certain countries, by no means only Great Britain, are worried about Italy's future policy in the Eastern Mediterranean.

3. France is becoming worried about its position in Africa, particularly in view of Il Duce's creating a huge native army.

In an official communication to the League tonight the Ethiopian delegate, Wolde Mariam, said the Ethiopian people are "untamed."

Maintains Independence.

This apparently was the speech he had intended to make at today's session. Acting on instructions from Emperor Haile Selassie in Jerusalem, Mariam said:

"The greater part of Ethiopia to the west of its capital remains free and independent. Ethiopia continues to defend itself. It refuses to recognize the Italian armies' illegal occupation of the other part by force."

That Mussolini took strong issue with Great Britain concerning responsibility for an Italian air bombardment of a British Red Cross ambulance at Quoram, Ethiopia, several months ago was disclosed.

Britain recently sent a stiff protest to Italy over the bombing. The Italian reply, made public by the League, declares that Rome refuses to accept the view that an ambulance unit is privileged to fire on airplanes.

The note insisted that the first shots came from the site of the ambulance unit.

WPA Rolls in Virginia Will Be Reduced 5,000

John Galleher, national emergency council director for Virginia, said yesterday a sharp reduction had been ordered in Virginia works progress rolls, effective by June 15, according to the Associated Press.

By that date, he said, WPA rolls in Virginia must be reduced from 32,000 to 27,800.

Galleher said he did not know whether the cuts would be extended to other agencies financed by the 1935 relief act.

All relief rolls in Virginia now total approximately 50,000, he said, including about 10,000 in the Civilian Conservation Corps, between 32,000 and 33,000 on WPA rolls, and the remainder on rolls of other relief agencies.

Flood Aid Cited To Show Value Of Red Cross

Disaster Relief Director Tells Convention of Emergency Work.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 11.—The unprecedented series of appeals arising from spring floods and tornadoes testified again to the "sheer preeminence of the Red Cross as America's disaster relief agency," Robert E. Bondy told the annual convention of the organization tonight.

Bondy, director of the Red Cross disaster relief service, said experiences this spring had again confirmed the need for strong disaster preparedness committees in local chapters and paid tribute to the spirit of team work which enabled the organization to function effectively in stricken Eastern and Southern communities in which 649,000 persons suffered losses.

"Everywhere emergency care was promptly and effectively given," he said.

"No less thrilling is the story of universal co-operation of governmental organizations," Bondy said.

"This great system of relief does not just happen," he said. "It has grown through the years. We in the Red Cross must persist in this preparation and go forward into matters of prevention."

Shortly after the convention's four-day session was opened this morning a greeting from President Roosevelt, who is also national president of the Red Cross, was read. Addressed to Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the central committee of the organization, the President's letter said one of the reasons for "the love which the Red Cross inspires in all of us is that it is so typically democratic."

Miss Dorothy Deming, executive director of the National Organization for Public Health Nursing, told the conventoin, "numerically, we have not enough public health nurses anywhere."

Burglars Loot Flower-Shop Safe

Burglars broke into the office of the McCallum-Sauber Co., wholesale florists, at 1314 I street northwest, early yesterday, cracked the safe and escaped with more than $1,500.

Herbert M. Sauber, 4701 Connecticut avenue northwest, shop manager, told police entrance was gained by jimmying the front door. Detective Sergt. Frank O. Brass said it was an expert "break."

The thieves punched the combination out of the safe, he said. There were no fingerprints or telltale evidence. Four men, arrested late in the 1200 block of I street northwest, will be questioned in connection, Brass said. One of the men is a brother of Claude Bailey, Tri-State gangster, slain last year in an attempt to escape from Lorton.

U. S. Aids on Jury Attacked in Court

The contention that Government employes and pensioners are disqualified from acting as jurors in cases in which the United States is a party was advanced yesterday in a brief filed with the United States Supreme Court by Raymond Wood, who has challenged a law permitting such service in the District.

With two Government employes and a Civil War pensioner in its panel, a police court jury some months ago found Wood guilty of petit larceny, and consequently he was sentenced to 240 days in jail.

Heart of Pilsudski To Be Laid at Foot Of Mother's Coffin

Wilno, Poland, May 11 (AP).—In reverent response to the last wish of Poland's beloved dictator, a crystal urn containing the heart of Marshal Joseph Pilsudski is to be buried tomorrow at the foot of his mother's coffin.

Thousands of Poles, who knew the dictator as "Grandfather," will gather for the ceremonies in his favorite city, scene of his childhood and early youth, on the first anniversary of his death.

The urn will be transported in State to the military cemetery together with the coffin containing his mother's body, which has been temporarily interred at the Sainte Therese Church here.

In the presence of President Ignacy Moscicki, the entire cabinet, Gen. Rydz Smigly, chief inspector of the Polish army, and other officials and residents, the final burial service is to be read.

An amnesty for soldiers convicted of minor military crimes will become effective. Moscicki will deliver a radio address in commemoration of the dead marshal who gave Poland its republican constitution and inaugurated friendly relations between his nation and Germany.

Born Lucky

THIS little girl was born lucky—because her father is a man who doesn't believe in luck.

Rich? Oh no, he is far from rich. But he is a thoughtful man.

He knew that it would take years, with his salary, to save enough to make certain that the little new-comer—and her mother—would not be in want if anything should happen to him.

So, like millions of other Americans, he found the shortest road to peace of mind and security—in life insurance.

Now, whether he is here or not, his little girl will still have the advantages he planned for her. His wife will not have to worry about the necessities of life. And if he lives, his insurance will pay him an income, too, in later years.

That's one of the grandest things about life insurance. You don't have to die to win. You win both ways.

Perhaps you think your income isn't big enough to start such an insurance program. Other men have thought the same thing, and have been agreeably surprised.

When your life insurance representative calls on you within the next few days he will give you a booklet, "Seven Wise Men."

Read it carefully. It tells you how you—on your present income—can start a plan that means security for your family if you die, and security for your wife and yourself if you live.

THE SOONER YOU PLAN YOUR FUTURE . . . THE BETTER YOUR FUTURE WILL BE

BE WISE

More People And Less Money.

No one familiar with the rapid growth of governmental agencies in the last few years will be surprised to learn, from the Census Bureau's most recent estimates, that the District led all the States in rate of population increase from 1930 to 1935. In five years a city almost the size of Norfolk—so far as population is concerned—has been added to Washington. A great majority of the newcomers, of course, are Federal employes and their families.

Coincident with the Census Bureau report comes a statement from the National Civil Service Reform League that one-tenth of all individuals gainfully employed in the United States are drawing their salaries from tax funds. More than $4,000,000,000 per year is required, the league finds, to pay the salaries of Government employes, national, State and local. Roughly 38 per cent of all tax receipts are required to meet this expense, which, of course, is exclusive of unemployment relief payments. In this study may be found the explanation of the movement which has brought Washington a 22 per cent growth in so brief a period.

Nor is the entire story of the Capital City's expansion told in the D. C. census figures. Washington's residential areas have been pushed far beyond the District's boundaries into Maryland and Virginia, which, in some degree, accounts for the sizable increases estimated for those two States. As a metropolitan area, Washington is now a city of many more than 600,000 inhabitants.

When any metropolis becomes the center of such a migration it must necessarily undergo far-reaching adjustments. Unfortunately, Washington has been unusually handicapped in its efforts to accommodate so many new residents. The depression, coupled with this phenomenal influx of people, brought about an acute shortage of dwellings. The city budget was severely cut, making it impossible to expand essential municipal services at a time when needs were rapidly multiplying. A voteless community is still grappling with these problems, without nearly as much help as should be forthcoming from its city council on Capitol Hill.

While the population of the District was increasing 22 per cent, the total of municipal expenditures fell nearly 13 per cent, from $44,018,249 to $38,373,803. Health appropriations during that period show a slight decrease. In spite of the great burden which the influx of 107,000 persons has placed upon the schools, the allowance for all public education in the District fell from $12,601,874 in 1930 to $11,072,484 in 1935. An infinitesimal increase was allowed the Police Department to take care of a tremendous expansion of its responsibilities.

Since these census figures come from an unbiased Federal agency, they are worthy of careful attention in the conference committee where the District budget is now under discussion. They should be considered together with the report from L. H. Parker, expert for the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, showing Washington's per capita tax to be greater than that of any comparable city. These data offer convincing evidence in support of the District's very modest requests.

Under The Chin.

To the uninitiated, an epicure is simply a person bent on making much ado about nothing. The majority of people fondly believe that real cooking, like charity, begins at home. There are a few mouths, however, that water only at the mention of some foreign gastronomic triumphs. Probably the dispute will never be settled, though various epicurean societies meet month after month to dunk, drink and discard.

However, one Manhattan group, known as the Friends of Escoffier, did hand down a decree recently which should be good news to every one, whether he dote on corned beef or crepe suzette. Henceforth napkins shall be tucked into the collar! In the so-called best circles, that has always been a prerogative of the very young or the very old. Everyone else is supposed to hew to etiquette, letting the napkin fall where it may. And along with it, if balanced on a feminine lap, usually goes an avalanche of gloves, handkerchief and vanity case. Sometimes the assortment falls in a neat heap; at other times it slips under the table piece by piece.

That "very fancy foldings are not in good taste" is one of the elementary rules concerning the serviette. Also, it is not to be creased into a fan while one is trying vainly to memorize an extemporaneous after-dinner speech. No one has yet said what to do with a napkin when the time comes to join the ladies. Should it be folded or simply wadded and tucked dejectedly under the plate?

All these puzzling angles, however, fade into insignificance beside the all-important question—what to do with the napkin while juggling a sandwich, an olive, a cake, a cigarette and a glass!

The Issue At Geneva.

The struggle between Italy and Ethiopia may be over; not so the struggle between Italy and the League.

In the eyes of the nations assembled at Geneva, Ethiopia continues to exist as a juridical entity, even though Emperor Haile Selassie is in exile, even though the feudal state over which he ruled has collapsed, and even though Victor Emmanuel III has been proclaimed Emperor of Ethiopia. This seems at first glance an utterly unrealistic position for the League to take. But, on the other hand, it cannot submit meekly to Il Duce's fait accompli without committing suicide.

There are many who now argue that no good can be served by continuing sanctions, since a negotiated agreement now seems impossible. These individuals argue with some pertinence that the fact of Italy's victory over Ethiopia is one which no stiff-necked refusal to recognize it can change. The only consequence of such intransigeance, it is said, would be to add enormously to existing tensions.

To this argument the smaller nations of Europe have now given a clear reply. The stand taken by the Scandinavian bloc, by the Little Entente and by the Balkan Entente, in favor of the continuation of sanctions, indicates that even in defeat the principles upon which the League rests are strongly supported. It is an ironic circumstance, in this connection, that France, which for a time seemed to favor abandonment of sanction so as to hasten Italy's return to the council of anti-German powers, now wants sanctions continued. Leon Blum, the prospective head of the new Popular Front government, has gone so far as to apologize publicly to Great Britain for the dilatory and obstructionist Ethiopian policy of M. Laval.

The question arises: What, if anything, could be accomplished by the League in standing pat, in refusing either to move forward to further penalties against the successful aggressor or to admit defeat by abandoning existing sanctions? It cannot be denied that sanctions, while they did not prevent Italy from completing its conquest of Ethiopia, have seriously injured the Mediterranean kingdom. Probably, if continued indefinitely, they would lead to an economic collapse in Italy.

This is now problematical, particularly since, as the example of Ecuador reveals, the League nations may, individually or in groups, tacitly or actively abandon sanctions, whatever formal action the League takes or refuses to take. If sanctions have harmed Italy they have not been without cost to League states.

However, the continuance of the sanctions program would not be without a very practical significance. Italy has conquered most of Ethiopia, but it cannot consolidate its victory without foreign assistance. It is reported that already Mussolini's agents in Paris, London and New York have begun to sound out the possibilities of a loan to make possible the exploitation of the wealth of Italy's new colony. As long as the League refuses to recognize the validity of the annexation of Ethiopia, however, the path to such financial assistance will be blocked.

And until he can make practical application of this military triumph, Mussolini's conquest will prove a very hollow victory for Italy. As one of the American war correspondents phrased it early in the war: "The most effective sanction might be to turn Ethiopia over to Il Duce."

Investigating The RRA.

By April 1, the Rural Resettlement Administration, established a year ago through an executive order, had spent or authorized the expenditure of $151,000,000 and had $127,000,000 still available for utilization. Most of the money placed at its disposal has been allocated from the $4,880,000,000 emergency relief fund of 1935 and the rest has been obtained through transfers from other Government agencies.

Thus the RRA came into being without Congressional approval, and proceeded to finance its heterogeneous activities without seeking a specific Congressional appropriation. Free from hampering legislative restrictions upon the purposes for which he may spend, Administrator Tugwell has launched a great variety of projects, ranging from small loans and gifts to farmers to the financing of suburban housing units and co-operative farming developments.

As in the case of the Passamaquoddy project and the Florida ship canal, Congress finds itself grappling belatedly with problems created by its own irresponsible action in voting huge lump-sum appropriations. The question whether to drop isolated projects upon which relatively small amounts had been expended was, by comparison, easy to answer. The future of the RRA, on the other hand, raises a multitude of issues. That organization is one of the most empirical and least co-ordinated of the New Deal agencies. A study of its multifarious activities calls for hard application and intensive thinking about the social and economic implications of Dr. Tugwell's paternalistic innovations.

It is little short of scandalous that Congress has shown such slight interest in the plans and purpose of a sprawling agency employing over 13,000 persons, and given carte blanche to undertake all sorts of "useful projects." Fortunately, the Senate has at last passed a resolution calling upon the RRA to report on its expenditures and activities and render an opinion as to the advisability of undertaking future projects. The phrasing of the resolution and the manner of its adoption show very clearly that it is not a probe into suspected irregularities. It is a bona fide request for information that the Senate ought to have demanded long since as a check upon the spending of Federal funds.

The report should be made the basis for a really searching investigation of the purpose and activities of an organization that is investing large sums in dubious experiments, impinging upon the field of private enterprise, and duplicating the activities of other branches of the Government service.

Treasury Defense Is Needed.

The growing revolt against the tax bill within the Senate Finance Committee has resulted in the recall of Secretary Morgenthau and his experts to answer criticisms voiced during the open hearings.

If the proposal to tax undivided corporate profits had been exhaustively studied by the Treasury before a definite program was suggested, it seems highly improbable that the Finance Committee would be facing the unpleasant alternatives of either accepting the defective House bill or else rewriting or radically revising it upon short notice. The conviction grows that the Administration has again launched a half-baked proposal upon an unprepared Congress, in the belief that mere executive prestige would secure blind indorsement of its plans.

Senator Byrd, of Virginia, has shown commendable courage in appealing to Secretary Morgenthau for verification of data indicating that certain large corporations with substantial surpluses would perhaps escape taxation under the new measure, or at least pay much less than existing rates.

The Senator also fears that the chief sufferers from this so-called reform measure would be small and struggling corporations. As a Democrat, and an advocate of increased taxation to reduce the Federal deficit, he is in an especially strong position to wage a constructive fight upon a thoroughly unsound measure.

The issue raised by Senator Byrd, however, is only one of many objections to the proposed legislation that the Treasury experts have not yet met successfully. Dr. B. M. Anderson points out that the rates on corporate savings carried by the House bill are "appalling high progressive penalty rates." In his opinion they constitute a "legislative attack upon our one remaining adequately functioning normal source of capital." In support of this assertion he calls attention to the fact that high estate and inheritance taxes, and confiscatory surtaxes on individual incomes, have driven large fortunes into tax-exempt securities and discouraged new industrial ventures. These and other deterrents to capital accumulation have accentuated the importance of corporate surpluses as a source of new capital.

In principle there is much to be said for a reasonable levy upon undistributed earnings, and for taxation of dividends in the hands of stockholders. But, as Prof. Fairchild, of Yale, stated in his testimony before the Finance Committee, approval of such a system "implies that there shall be no discriminatory or punitive taxes upon the undistributed earnings, no tax to force a greater distribution than would follow from the wise discretion of the directors themselves."

The Treasury experts will, it may be surmised, have a difficult task trying to defend a proposal that, regardless of the size of taxed corporations, would interfere with the stabilization of dividends and wages, retard debt repayments, and conflict with protective State laws and centractual obligations designed to prevent impairment of capital. It is particularly ironical that an Administration pledged to hasten business recovery and protect the weak against the strong should be urging passage of a measure that runs directly counter to both of these objectives.

When this country emerges from the depression it will be like the man who took every remedy suggested for a bad cold—it won't have the slightest idea what effected the cure.

Perhaps the reason why it is almost impossible to get a newspaperman to write a letter is because it has a circulation of only 1.

Red Cross Origins.

Don C. Smith in the Red Cross Courier.

Under the Geneva Convention of 1864 it is established that the Red Cross societies of signatory nations are duly constituted auxiliaries of the medical services of the land and naval forces. It is because of that fact that the use of the emblem of a red cross on a white ground is enjoyed by the societies, although our Army and Navy medical services have the prior claim to its use.

In other words, the organic relationship between the American Red Cross and the United States Army and Navy is with and through the medical departments of these forces. War Service is the administrative division of our national Red Cross which deals with the social and medical-social problems of the personnel of the military and naval establishments, including their families; with the war-born problems of veterans, and with the disabilities of both war veterans and the men discharged from peace-time service because of injuries incurred in duty.

District Representation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As one of three generations of native Washingtonians born and still living in the Nation's Capital, their only home, I would like to ask Mr. Alexander Sidney Lanier, who is so bitterly opposed to national representation for the people of the District of Columbia, if he happens to be one of them; or is he from a State, where he has the right and privilege as an American citizen to vote, and to ask him if he does not consider that a right and privilege should be extended to his fellow Americans who happened to be born in the District of Columbia?

I should like to ask Mr. Lanier, as he states in his letter to The Post, why he thinks by giving the people of the District of Columbia the same rights and privileges as the people in other parts of not only the United States but the capitals of the other republics of the world that "the results would be disastrous socially and politically to the District and would not contribute any thing to the peace and good order of this community?"

In my opinion, giving the people of the District of Columbia national representation will clothe the Washingtonian with a vital American privilege to which he is undeniably in equity entitled; will cleanse him of the stigma and stain of un-Americanism, and curing his political impotency, will arm him with a certain power and will relieve the Nation of the shame of un-Americanism.

It will inflict no injury or hardship upon either Nation or Capital to counteract these benefits.

ANNA E. HENDLEY,

No Differences Necessary.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As one who has seen much of Jewish life and people here and in Palestine, I must regret with many of your readers to see from so prominent a Jew as Dr. Leo M. Franklin (in your issue of May 9) statements to the effect that "there never will be a solution to the (so-called) Jewish problem," and that the "Jew must live a Jewish life in an American environment;" or, for that matter, in any country where his lot is cast, he must still protest that he is a stranger in a strange land. He must hang up his harp on the willow trees and refuse to sing until he is restored to his native land.

It is just this sort of talk that is ever widening the often almost imperceptible line between the Jew and the non-Jew. I traveled with the Hon. Oscar Straus for thousands of miles and found we did not differ on any essential thing.

But the more the Jews, or any other race, emphasize their differences by such talk as is reported from Dr. Franklin, the longer will the distinctions which Dr. Franklin deplores be kept up. No sane Christian wants or expects a Jew to be a Christian in the formal sense of the term; but there are principles upon which both Jew and Christian can meet, based on the accepted truths of the Old Testament prophets.

No Christian can or will disagree with a Jew on the statement of the prophet Micah; "What does the Lord require but to do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with thy God?" Why make differences when there is no occasion to do it, since both Christian and Jew accept the same essential truths? J. O. KNOTT.

Bus In The Beard.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: These buses are getting in my beard. Any transit company official will tell you that they cost a good bit less than a street car, and keeping the driver-conductor-change-maker-old-ladies'-guide-and-taxi-dodger working full steam for 9 hours and 40 minutes at a stretch (so one of the chaps told me) certainly strengthens the strategy of attracting shekels to the company till. But what the buses have done to a nice, genteel street like I is an abomination in the sight of man.

Well, it is easier for a camel to swan-dive through a needle's eye than it is for the poor public to sway the plans of our titulary gods, the Public Utilities. The buses—don't question it—are here to stay. But perhaps we can sweeten the stew we are in by exercising certain faculties.

First, we can trouble the deaf Commissioners with our bootless cries that when buses go down a narrow street, that street should be made one-way with the bus traffic. Washington ought to get out of short pants in this matter.

Second, the motorists should rise up on their hind legs and yelp, to the effect that when the buses, often two abreast on Connecticut avenue, say, occupy the whole of the public's thoroughfare, then by rights the motorists should be able to drive to the left of the car-loading platform without blushing. We can't have the Public Utilities pushing us entirely off the street.

And third, the people who ride in buses can at least demand good drivers. I don't mean to be hard on the poor chaps who have to earn a living that way. But when a driver—I sat behind one just now—starts honking for Florida avenue as soon as he starts down-hill from California street, lets out a blast for every sparrow that crosses the road, swerves out into traffic as if he were practicing ice-skating, and draws up with an habitual bang which the railroads reserve for full emergency stops, then I think that young gentleman had better enter a haberdashery. Let those of us who care make a note of said driver—you'll find his number on his cap—and inform the Transit Company delicately of the matter. And let us be quite as pointed over the good drivers, and make it known to the company when they have, as they certainly do, a paragon in their employ.

But personally I don't much care any more. For I'm off to Alaska, where a man can grow a beard without getting a bus in it.

What Borah Would Do.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A number of your readers are right about the candidacy of Borah, in this humble opinion. Hoover was the best qualified President ever to occupy the exposed location at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue. But it took his successor to show him the value of politics, plus plenty of "theater." It was simply his tough luck that the pyramid bubble burst during his term, so why waste adverbs?

Several Republican candidates wouldn't get to first base against the Roosevelt-Farley-Labor-Bonus-Five-Billion-Dollar combine. One or two by supreme effort might reach the middle sack and be left stranded, but Borah could beat the relay to the plate with a couple of inches to throw away.

He wouldn't discard any part of the New Deal worth keeping, but the thing to cheer about in his administration would be what he would not inflict upon the American people, and the rapid undoing of a multitude of New Deal mistakes.

A Reply To Mr. Oyster.

To the Editor of The Post: Sir: Fairfax Oyster's point of view, which you printed, concerning the summer concerts at the Watergate is, indeed, a very interesting one . . . to read. "According to the press," he writes, "Mr. Kindler will be in Europe the early part of the summer." Such an enthusiast as Mr. Oyster is purported to be should know that Hans Kindler has an honorary degree of doctor of music and should be referred to as Dr. Kindler. The press did not say conclusively that Dr. Kindler would be away altogether. He will return to this country for other engagements and will be here for most of the summer concerts.

Mr. Oyster says, "Washington is entitled to good music the year round." I wonder at this. Doesn't he know we have an orchestra during the winter which can play during the summer as well as in the winter? During the past five years where has his interest been in that orchestra? He has never contributed anything to its sustaining fund. He has never shown any particular interest in his belief that Washington should have good music by furthering its welfare. Why should he suddenly, because he finds a musician who is simply "crazy about Washington," become so interested in its musical welfare? Why isn't he on the board of directors of our orchestra with his so-called enthusiasm and public spirit? Just what exactly, is his motive in having a second orchestra?

I agree that Mr. Bunchuk is a great artist. There is no doubt that he is an excellent and proven cellist. So was Dr. Kindler when he started his orchestra. But if Mr. Oyster heard that orchestra five years ago he would have an idea how Mr. Bunchuk's orchestra would probably sound. It has taken five years to perfect our orchestra and will take Mr. Bunchuk no less time to give as good a performance.

Mr. Bunchuk seeks no financial assistance. Just what is Mr. Oyster's plan: to run a symphony orchestra of 90 men without financial help? There are eight symphony orchestras in this country that would like to know how this can be done. Why doesn't public-spirited Mr. Oyster tell the National Symphony Orchestra his secret? It certainly is a mystery to a great number of musical organizations whose directors, for the most part, are men in the financial world!

"And Mr. Bunchuk is in perfect accord with the union." That wouldn't be difficult for the National Symphony to be. All it would have to do is use musicians who live in Washington regardless of the excellence of their performance simply because they belong to the union and the union demands that they be employed. To do this would place the orchestra in perfect accord with the union. But what about the music? The orchestra association's real controversy with the union is upholding its standard of performance, which is certainly important to the listener. The listener, Mr. Oyster, is also part of the concert.

Considering the feasibility of its success, the need of the people, the standard of performance, no new orchestra is desirable. For summer symphonies by an accomp'ished orchestra support the National Symphony. ARTHUR COHEN.

Dr. Freud's Parents.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While your readers all deeply appreciate your kind indulgence in permitting peculiar views to have a voice in your letter column, it does seem passing strange that, of all days, Mother's Day should have been marred by any such views as seen in some letters, especially the one signed by F. W. Abbe.

Did Sigmund Freud ever have a right kind of pair of parents? Elsewhere Freud says, "I cannot recommend my manner of life or activity to anyone else." So, being past 80 and past being more sour than he has always been, he has "put a period to his work," and gleefully gloats over the damage done by his so-called "analyzing" victims landed in the coils of his deluded disciples.

Why not remember Oliver Wendell Holmes: "The life of the law has not been of logic: it has been experience."

Equality For Mothers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Last Sunday morning flags appeared on Government buildings. This is not usual on Sunday. Later I discovered it was Mother's Day.

It seems to me if the men would keep their flags furled and grant mothers "equality before the law," it would be an act of justice and one greatly appreciated.

The Post Impressionist

Leads Again!

America

Post Office, Tuesday.

AMERICANS are living too luxuriously.

It may surprise you to hear this—nowadays. It surprised your columnist so deeply that he forthwith postponed buying a new straw hat. Surely you shared our belief that the depression had long ago taken up all the luxury slack.

Nevertheless, Americans are living too luxuriously.

A lot of them are ill through living too luxuriously—that's how the cat got out of the bag: a whole lot—about 400,000. Soon there will be 2,000,000.

Hard times? The number of American citizens thus sickening from luxurious living increases at the jolly rate of 100,000 a year.

If not a hundred per cent American, this phenomenon is at least chiefly American. It is another feather in the national cap.

The victims' trouble is, or soon will be, diabetes.

You thought that every diabetic danger ended with the discovery of the insulin treatment?

Well, well—our fellow Americans' faith in science is equalled only by their lack of faith in certain quarters where faith could be more securely reposed.

Of course, the Post-Impressionist doffs his helm to insulin and to Dr. Banting, who gave, through insulin, new hope to diabetics. "Fourteen years ago, 175,000 Americans were condemned to death by this disease," and Dr. Banting's insulin saved from immediate extinction about all who tried it.

But Dr. Banting never maintained that his method of treatment could effect a cure! All he maintained was that insulin arrests the progress of diabetes.

So, while extant cases were brought to a pause, hundreds of potential cases went merrily along until they became positive cases. Now Collier's Weekly has completed a careful survey of diabetes in the United States—and we've told you the result.

What, however, is the cause—not of the survey, but of the ailment's undisturbed march forward?

According to Collier's surveyors, many diabetics are now alive who, but for insulin, would have long ago been dead. They swell the total.

These determined survivors simply will marry. They beget diabetic children.

In the third place, everybody—thanks to other advances in medicine besides the insulin advance—lives longer than people were in the habit of living during earlier portions of modern times. Diabetes is largely a post-maturity illness: the reaping of youth's whirlwind. So now more people survive long enough to get it.

But still, according to Collier's to them: "A really serious cause to them: "A really serious caue of the increase is the luxurious life most of us . . . lead. We don't exercise much. We eat tons of sweets . . . five times as much sugar as Italy, for instance."

And look at what Italy did to Ethiopia!

Says Collier's Weekly also:

"One-fifth f all Americans are overweight, most of that fifth are not youngsters, and the increase in diabetes is among people over 40. Doctors have good reason to believe that, if they could start now and reduce every single member of that overweight fifth of the population, they would redu e the number of diabetics, by half or more, in a very few years."

Apparently, however, these fat-and-forty sufferers are still too agile to be overtaken by the healthy physician.

Nevertheless, our point is proved: Sweets are a luxury; fat is a greater luxury; abstinence from exercise is—to this columnist's mind—the greatest luxury of the three. And all of the trio, says C. W., help along diabetes, and diabetes is increasing in America as—well, as you've just been told. So, through what we devoutly hope are depression's last days, America is living too luxuriously. Q. E. D.

After that, we may be pardoned an anticlimax:

As a non-Collier's doctor, patent-medicine Dr. Munyon, used to say, "There is hope!" For hear ye:

The Collier experts aver that, whereas the average diabetic of the Pre-Insulin Era used to die at 47, the average Post-Insulin specimen hangs on until he's 60.

And his life can be useful. Collier's Weekly cites:

France's great war-premier, Clemenceau, a diabetic who died at 88—though it strikes us that he must have done his hardest and best work before Dr. Banting could help him. George V, erstwhile King of England, Emperor of India, something or other of the Irish Free State. And (mind you, this is on the Collier authority—not ours!) H. G. Wells.

In the face of such human facts—if facts they are—the Post-Impressionist would, after all, like to know what Germany means—we quote C. W. for the last time—by considering "the advisability of sterilizing all diabetics!"

Dinner Parties

By William Lyon Phelps.

Eating After Dark.

In London and Paris and New York the great enemy of the theater and the opera and the concert is the dinner party.

This is the way many people prepare for the opera or for a good play: They get up a theater party of 10 or 12; they invite them to a course dinner; after this dinner, to which half of the company have arrived late, the whole party, full of food and drink, arrive at the opera or theater after the curtain has gone up.

An athlete might just as well practice the same method of preparation before a half-mile race. To enjoy a good play or a great opera or a fine concert one should get there in plenty of time, one should not have eaten and drunk copiously, one should be really prepared in body and mind. For a good play and good music require the best mental powers on the part of a spectator or listener.

A London playwright has complained that not only do people dine so late that they are always late at the theater and in no mood to receive it, but dancing—which is really an athletic exercise—now takes place in all towns in the world while people are eating. Or, as he expresses it, "Now the best people dance during dinner with their mouths full of fish."

* * * *

Some years ago, the theater managers, seeing dinner and dancing encroaching on the theater evening hour, held a symposium as to whether people would consent to go without a hearty meal until after the theater—that is, have the plays begin early—or whether, in order to get in both the dinner and the play, the theaters should not begin until half-past nine or ten. Accordingly they sent out this question to many prominent writers: At what hour should the curtain rise? There was a vast difference of opinion. Bernard Shaw's answer was characteristic: "For the majority of English plays, the curtain should not rise at all."

Unionism In Detroit

Observer At South Bend Convention Sees Boost For Vertical Theory In Automobile Works' New Charter.

By Earl G. Latham.

Special Correspondence of the Post.

Detroit.

THE INTERNATIONAL Union, United Automobile Works of America, the first organization of mass production workers to receive an international charter, formally ended its period of probation under the supervision of the American Federation of Labor at its recent convention in South Bend, Ind.

The union may now be in a better position to pursue the policies of industrial unionism advocated by the A. F. of L.'s committee for Industrial Organization, of which John L. Lewis is chairman. The committee has long felt that two factors have contributed to the failure to make more progress than has been made in the organization of automobile workers as well as other mass production workers.

The first of these is the charge that craft organizations having jurisdiction claims in the automobile industry have refused to relinquish those claims in a concerted drive for organization. The second is that these jurisdictional quarrels and the conservatism of the craft point of view have led to the development of a defeatist philosophy which regards the unskilled worker as one who is unwilling to organize and poor union material when he is organized.

No Structural Changes Anticipated For Union.

THE ADOPTION of resolutions favoring industrial unionism and a more militant strike policy and the anticipated support of the committee for Industrial Organization do not necessarily mean, however, that serious changes in the structure of the union will be made. It already is definitely industrial in character, although not perhaps to the degree to which some of the proponents of industrial unionism would like to see it.

The immediate importance of these resolutions lies more in the commencement of a vigorous organizational drive, to succeed if possible where the A. F. of L. has allegedly failed. There is no doubt that by becoming a full-fledged international with its own elected officers the union has acquired a new unit of purpose and an improved morale which should enable it to concentrate upon this task.

One element in the hoped-for solidarity among automobile workers is the hope that one and perhaps more of the independent unions in the industry will amalgamate with the United Automobile Workers of America. The largest of the independents, the Automotive Industrial Workers of America has an estimated membership of 20,000. Such an amalgamation would do much to obviate some of the feeling among unorganized workers that there is grave economic risk in joining any one faction of several which are working at cross purposes. The convention recognized the importance of bringing the independents into the international by providing a seat upon its executive board for a representative of such unions if and when an amalgamation takes place.

The cultivation of a spirit of harmony in the convention was due in great part to the strategy and direction of the representatives of the committee for Industrial Organization who were in constant attendance at the proceedings. As far as possible contentious questions were taken out of debate and referred to the executive board for appropriate action, as for example a resolution calling for the expulsion of Communists. The jurisdictional provisions of the international's constitution were left unamended for it is the philosophy of the committee for Industrial Organization that members, not paper claims, make jurisdiction.

Much Missionary Work Still Needed.

THE WORK of the international is yet before it, however. A good deal of missionary work must be done before potential converts will risk discrimination and discharge in a community with the open-shop reputation of Detroit. Even the building of an organization is only a preliminary, although a very necessary one, to the real work of a trade union, which is the conduct of collective bargaining negotiations.

Should the executive heads of the internatoinal call a premature strike in the industry to appease the restlessness of the rank and file at the failure of collective bargaining the development of automobile trade unions would be retarded for many years to come. Tactical strikes which are lost because the membership and resources of the union are insufficient for a long siege invariably engender bitterness and dissension among workers and create serious obstacles to future organization.

It was to avoid this danger that a resolution calling for a general strike in the industry in 1937 if management refuses to bargain collectively was ordered referred to the executive board by the convention. Obviously, to make strike action mandatory upon the officers in the event of a refusal to recognize the union would commit them to a policy which the circumstances in 1937 might not justify.

Because of the comparative inexperience of the officers of the international, consideration of any industry-wide strike action will make necessary the advice of those more experienced in trade union tactics. This advice the Committee for Industrial Organization stands ready to give, according to spokesmen for the committee. Such a situation has an element of danger in it, however, for the committee will undoubtedly be influential in shaping policy without being responsible for the result.

Future Will Depend On Caliber Of Leaders.

THE KEYNOTE of the convention was unity and solidarity. Whether this harmony continues depends upon the caliber of the leadership during the coming year.

The gains made by the international so far have been largely the result of the conservative but shrewd tactics of the probationary leadership. Impatience with this program has led to the adoption of a more militant policy. How far it succeeds will be determined by the character and extent of the guidance and support which the Committee for Industrial Organization will give the new union.

The international has ended one probationary period, but its real probation, as well as that of the Committee for Industrial Organization, has just begun.

escaped this blight. Political patronage, both in jobs and material contracts, has reduced the WPA program and the Resettlement Administration to purely political organizations for the duration of the campaign."

Bacon called attention to the poll of the American Institute of Public Opinion printed in The Washington Post two weeks ago in which the majority of persons questioned expressed the opinion that politics play a part in administration of relief.

"Not one State returned a majority vote in the negative," he said. "In every one of the 48 States, the majority opinion prevails that the relief agencies are operating as a part of the Democratic national campaign—a campaign kept going largely by these fabulous grants of relief money from the Federal Treasury."

The first action on the deficiency bill yesterday was rejection by the House of a motion by Representative Taber (Republican), New York, to recommit it to the committee, with instructions to provide for State grants. The motion was defeated, 286 to 90.

Next to relief, the largest item in the deficiency bill is $458,621,860 for the administration of the social security act.

Voting for the bill were 269 Democrats, 62 Republicans and 7 Farmer-Laborites.

Democrats voting against the bill were: Burch, Virginia; Castellow, Georgia; Peterson, Georgia; Robertson, Virginia; Smith, Virginia; Tarver, Georgia; Taylor, South Carolina.

Palmer Is Dead; Cabinet Officer Under Wilson

Former Attorney General Dies After Operation for Appendicitis.

A. Mitchell Palmer, 64, Attorney General of the United States during the Wilson Administration, died yesterday in Emergency Hospital following an appendicitis operation April 29.

Death occurred at 2 p. m., Dr. Harry M. Kaufman, who attended Palmer throughout his illness, said. Cardiac complications following his operation brought the end.

At Palmer's bedside when he died were his wife and his only daughter, Mary Dixon Palmer.

Funeral services will be held at the home of his lifelong friend, Malcolm McConihe, 2817 Woodland drive northwest, tomorrow at 11 a. m., with the Rev. ZeBarney Phillips, rector of the Church of the Epiphany, officiating. Burial will be in Friends Cemetery, Stroudsburg, Pa., Thursday.

A member of the peace-loving Society of Friends, Palmer's series of battles during the height of his public career gained him the title of the "Fighting Quaker." He had been quietly practicing law here since his defeat for the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1920. He lived at Wardman Park Hotel.

Occasionally Palmer emerged from private life to show that age had not robbed him of his right to his title.

View on Constitution.

His latest appearance was in June, 1935, a few weeks after the Supreme Court had discarded NRA. Taking up the cudgels of those who would change the Constitution, he said in a speech before the Democratic State committee of Pennsylvania:

"The question is whether the Constitution shall be pickled in its original liquor and stubbornly preserved in its pristine form, or whether it shall be preserved in the manner in which its framers intended, to meet the changing demands of the new growth and development of a great country."

Palmer's battles as Attorney General and alien property custodian during the war brought him the Nation-wide reputation which nearly won him his party's nomination for the Presidency.

Soon after America entered the war President Wilson appointed him as the first alien property custodian. As such he seized $700,000,000 worth of enemy property and started a series of suits, controversies and investigations which lasted for years.

Most famous of these was litigation over seizure of German dye and chemical patents. After war was declared it was discovered that this country had practically no means of manufacturing these important products.

Contending that the move was needed to build up an American industry free from German dominance, Palmer turned the patents over to the Chemical Foundation.

The wrangles over his administration of this office continued after his appointment in February, 1919, as Attorney General.

The Senate held up his confirmation for six months pending results of a Congressional investigation into his former office. The charges against him were not sustained, although Samuel Untermyer, New York attorney, and others carried on a bitter fight to discredit him.

Palmer was perhaps best known because of a bomb which ripped the front of his R street home and nearly took his life a few months after he had assumed charge of the country's law enforcement agencies.

Just before midnight on June 2, 1919, a man was about to place a bomb on the Attorney General's doorstep when it exploded, blowing him to bits and leaving only a radical pamphlet, "Plain Words," as identification.

Palmer, who was getting ready for bed on the second floor, was unhurt. However, the escape was a narrow one. He mapped plans for the vigorous campaign against the reds which became one of the outstanding events in early post-war history.

Public opinion was ripe for such a crusade. Similar explosions had maimed several persons. A smart postal official in New York had just saved such persons as Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, John D. Rockefeller, J. P. Morgan and several Cabinet members from possible death by intercepting 19 bombs addressed to them.

Blocked Coal Strike.

The Attorney General picked the great coal strike as his first object of attack. The day before it was scheduled to begin he secured from a Federal judge in Indianapolis an order tying the hands of the leaders of the strike.

Next morning 400,000 miners walked out. But they found themselves leaderless and the strike failed. Palmer's critics remarked that there was a certain grim humor in the fact that he was the chief legal officer of an Administration elected to bring about the New Freedom.

The "Fighting Quaker's" next move was to direct a series of raids to round up Communist leaders for deportation to Russia via Finland on the ship Buford, which his adversaries soon dubbed the "Soviet Ark."

Palmer was the father of the woman suffrage amendment, a joint resolution for which he introduced in the House. He also was the author of the act prohibiting the products of child labor in interstate commerce.

Following his defeat at the Democratic convention in San Francisco in 1920, at which, with James M. Cox and William G. McAdoo, he was a member of the "Big Three," he turned to the private practice of law in Washington as a member of the firm of Palmer, Stellwagen, Scott & Boggs.

The Teapot Dome investigation brought him into the limelight once more. On the stand he was called to defend, under fierce cross-examination, his decision while Attorney General to dismiss prosecution of the famous Southern Pacific land cases in California.

Palmer held honorary degrees from Swarthmore and Lafayette colleges and George Washington University.

He is survived by his second wife, Mrs. Margaret Burrall Palmer, and his daughter by a previous marriage, who was at his bedside when he died. His first wife, Roberta Dixon Palmer, whom he married in 1898, died 14 years ago. He remarried the following year.

Inflation Vote Assured

torium bill held unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court.

In the House yesterday, 51 Republicans voted with 159 Democrats, 7 Progressives and 3 Farmer-Laborites to call the new $3,000,000,000 inflationary measure immediately before the chamber, while 115 Democrats and 38 Republicans opposed "discharge." Action followed more than a year's effort to force the bill to the floor, climaxing a fortnight ago when 218 signatures of members completed a petition to compel consideration.

The leadership obviously was concerned, but again forecast the bill will be beaten on the final vote. Speaker Joseph W. Byrns made this prediction on the basis of a new poll by House Democratic Whip Patrick Boland, who for a week past has been actively canvassing House sentiment.

House Majority Leader William Bankhead backed this up with the following statement:

"The vote today had no significance. The bill will be defeated. Mr. Jones (Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House Agricultural Committee), will lead the fight, and I expect a vote Thursday. As far as amendments go, I do not favor any. It should be a straight 'up or down' vote on the bill.

"This is not a 'farm' bill, but a currency inflation bill, affecting only 15 per cent of the farmers of the country. As a matter of fact, 66 per cent of the farmers have no farm indebtedness."

Representative William Lemke (Republican), of North Dakota, co-author of the bill, authorized a directly contrary statement. Lemke said:

"It still looks like a 2-to-1 vote for the bill. I plan to offer no material amendments, but am anxious for debate to begin. Not more than 100 members know exactly what's in the measure, due to misrepresentations made by opponents and the press. They claim it is inflationary, when it is not inflationary at all. We expect to make this clear during debate."

Only two members were heard on the motion to discharge the Rules Committee and they were both for the bill—Representatives Hampton P. Fullmer, of South Carolina, and William P. Connery, of Massachusetts (Democrats). They consumed precisely three minutes. Chairman John J. O'Connor of the Rules Committee announced he would reserve his fight for the bill itself.

The discharge motion was first adopted by a close standing vote of 145 to 134, but a roll call developed a margin of 220 to 153.

Failure of anyone to demand a record vote on the rule following the discharge motion appeared a surprise to the Speaker himself.

"The 'ayes' appear to have it," he said, as the voice vote was taken. Once more came the Speaker's voice, after some hesitation:

"The 'ayes' appear to have it."

Standing near the House well, O'Connor shrugged.

"The 'ayes' have it," announced the Speaker, sounding his gavel.

In the two minutes alloted him, Fulmer demanded the bill be considered "on its merits," declaring the American Liberty League and "the money changers" are responsible for charges that the measure is "inflationary."

Connery spoke for one minute. He said the Federal Reserve Board already has authority to expand the currency "billions of dollars" and "we shouldn't be afraid of a small $3,000,000,000." He declared there can be no real prosperity until farmers and laborers alike are receiving more income.

Standing in the rear of the chamber after adjournment, House Whip Boland offered to bet reporters that the bill will be defeated. There was a difference, he said, in voting to give consideration to a bill and voting for the bill itself. In the Illinois delegation alone, he said, were 21 members who voted to take the bill up, who will vote against it on the final count.

A similar view was taken by Representative Frank Hancock, of North Carolina, who voted to discharge the Rules Committee because, he said, he has "very positive convictions" regarding legislative procedure, but must vote against final passage.

"After a careful study of this measure," said Hancock, "frankness compels me to say that I think in its present form it is an unsound, unfair and grossly discriminatory bill. It is calculated to disrupt the entire credit system of the country. I therefore cannot support it."

A flood of amendments may be offered to the bill, but the probability is that many of them will be declared not germane. One move is expected to make the bill apply to debt-laden city dwellers, as well as farmers. The Jones bill, authorizing Federal intermediate credit banks to issue currency in order to obtain funds to finance their lending operations, also may be offered.

The pending Frazier-Lemke bill, which will be before the House for the next three days, would refinance farm mortgages at a 1¼ per cent interest rate, and a further payment of 1½ per cent annually to amortize the loan. Bonds would be issued to finance the program, and against these the Federal Reserve board might be forced to issue up to $3,000,000,000 in new currency.

The board of agriculture, which would supervise the work of refinancing farm mortgages, would be chosen by delegates elected at county mass meetings attended only by farmers in debt, who expect to take advantage of the benefits offered by the bill.

St. Paul, May 11 (AP).—The United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit today ruled unconstitutional one farm relief measure sponsored by Senator L. J. Frazier and Representative Lemke—the amended Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium act.

Foreclosure of a mortgage on a 160-acre farm near Omaha, Nebr., owned by William Pamp, resulted i nthe original lawsuit which resulted eventually in today's decision.

The action began three years ago and still was in ligation when the United States Supreme Court held the first Frazier-Lemke mortgage moratorium act unconstitutional last May 27.

The Federal District Court at Omaha, under the act as amended by Congress in 1935, allowed Pamp to retain his farm for three years by paying a "reasonable rental" semiannually.

The Omaha court's order was reversed by today's ruling and the entire action was remanded for continuation of the foreclosure proceedings.

The court's order, quoting Justice Brandeis in the Supreme Court decision, stated further:

"If the public interest requires, and permits, the taking of property of individual mortgagees in order to relieve the necessities of individual mortgagors, resort must be had to proceedings by eminent domain; so that, through taxation, the burden of relief afforded in the public interest may be borne by the public."

The decision was given by Judges A. K. Gardner, of Huron, S. Dak.; A. B. Van Valkenburgh and Charles B. Faris, of St. Louis.

The Omaha court's finding was carried to the appeals court by the United States National Bank of Omaha, Nebr.

available only to certain specified committees of Congress.

"I sall be quite willing, on request of the Finance Committee and under the authorization of this section, to furnish any and all information that the committee may desire, which is available," Morgenthau added. "Anticipating such a request, I have directed that data hearing on your inquiries be assembled without delay."

45th Birthday.

With a background of large American beauty roses, in a black vase (yesterday was his forty-fifth birthday), Morgenthau received reporters in his office, and discussed the Byrd incident.

He said that despite the fact he regarded the Virginian's letter as a request for something "illegal," he was having the information prepared so there would be no lost motion.

"My policy is always to give as promptly and fully as I can any information properly available," he said.

It was on being informed of this statement that Byrd replied he saw nothing "illegal" in his request, but if it was necessary, would have another resolution passed by the Finance Committee today.

Morgenthau showed some aversion to appearing before the Finance Committee in executive session.

"I would rather testify in public," he said. When a reporter made the point that by law his testimony was required to be in executive session, Morgenthau threw up his hands and exclaimed: "I'd rather do it in public, and have you fellows do the reporting.

"I am ready to come as soon as the information is available," he said. "It may be a physical impossibility for the Bureau of Internal Revenue to furnish it by Wednesday. If so, I'll appear Wednesday, and merely say 'How do you do.'"

Revision Inevitable.

With a clear majority of the Senate Finance Committee now opposed to the Administration's tax plan in its present form, some material revision appeared inevitable. Speculation turned on whether the Administration itself would make a compromise offer. An early White House conference on the present apparent impasse was forecast in several quarters.

One of the outstanding plans put forward for modification of the bill (by Senator Tom Connally, Democrat, of Texas) would retain as a basis the present 15 per cent corporation income tax with a graduated surtax on undistributed earnings, from 10 to 20 per cent, superimposed. Dividends would be made subject to normal as well as surtax income levies.

Although Chairman Harrison failed to talk "compromise," he reiterated his forecast that the philosophy of the President's proposal would be contained in any bill passed. Asked the specific question, he said he did not regard Connally's plan as contrary to the spirit of the bill.

Under the Connally plan, claimed to raise the $600,000,000 asked by the President, a corporation would be permitted to withhold 20 per cent of its taxable net income before becoming subject to the following schedule of surtaxes:

Percentage Retained	Percent of Tax
First 20 per cent	No tax
Second 20	10 per cent
Third 20	13 per cent
Fourth 20	16 per cent
Fifth 20	20 per cent

For a corporation with $100,000 of taxable net income in a given year, such a plan would operate as follows:

Earnings	Rate	Tax
$100,000	15 per cent	$15,000
First 20 per cent	No tax
Second 20	10 per cent	$ 1,700
Third 20	13 per cent	$ 2,210
Fourth 20	16 per cent	$ 2,720
Fifth 20	20 per cent	$ 3,400
Total tax		$25,080

Walsh Quoted.

Among Senate Finance Committee Democrats who permitted themselves to be quoted on details of the bill yesterday for the first time was Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, who said in effect that he did not believe all corporations should be subjected to a penalty tax because some are suspected of withholding earnings for tax avoidance purposes.

Walsh said he regarded this as the "fundamental weakness" of the bill, pointing out that there is "a large group of corporations which must and should retain earnings without being penalized.

The Massachusetts Senator said he believed it would be necessary to retain the present flat corporation income tax, with a moderately graduated super-tax added on undistributed earnings.

Senator Walter F. George (Democrat), of Georgia, said:

"It seems to me the main feature of the bill—the tax on undistributed corporate income—must necessarily have some revision. Beyond that I do not feel free to express myself."

Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, said:

"The bill in its present form is unsatisfactory, and must be materially revised."

The measure was outspokenly criticized at yesterday's Finance Committee meeting before a test vote was averted by Chairman Harrison's intercession.

Mrs. Lindbergh Book Receives Sellers' Award

Rachel Field Novel, Work by Vincent Sheean Are Also Honored.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 11 (AP). — Anne Morrow Lindbergh's book, "North to the Orient," today was given the award of the American Booksellers Association for the most distinguished general nonfiction work published in 1935, excluding biography and ephemeral subjects.

"Time Out of Mind," by Rachel Field, was chosen as the most distinguished novel of the year; "The Circus of Dr. Lao," by Charles G. Finney, as the most original novel, and "Personal History," by Vincent Sheean, as the most distinguished biography.

The booksellers' awards, made for the first time this year, were started, the association said, because "each year existing awards have been received by the booksellers, frequently with storms of protest, sometimes with approbation, always with argument and discussion."

At the annual banquet of the association tonight, Sinclair Lewis, the novelist, speaking of the competition of motion pictures and the radio, said "bookselling is taking such a beating as it has not known for years."

"I do not believe that anything will altogether supplant the old-fashioned printed book, which has changed so very little since Gutenberg finished printing the first book, a Bible, back in 1455, almost 500 years ago," he said.

"I do not believe that any nimble television apparatus, any series of phonograph records, any ingenious microscopic gadget whereby you can carry the entire works of Balzac in your cigarette case, will take the place of books, just as we know them.

"But there is a change, and that change is in a much greater selectivity on the party of a majority of readers, so that perhaps we shall continue the past decade's process of writing fewer and better books and, also, selling fewer and better books."

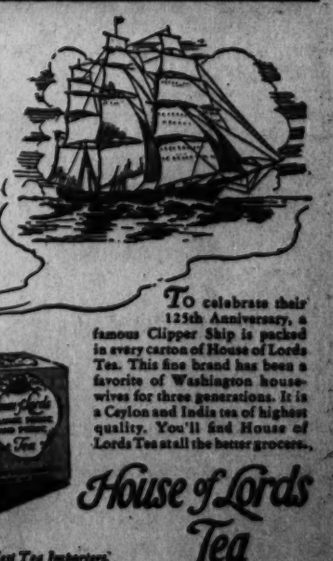
Romance of Ships and Tea



THE romance of Clipper Ships is the romance of tea. These ocean greyhounds were used mainly for running tea from the Orient. ¶ One of the fastest was the "Flying Cloud". Her record of 127 days from New York to Hongkong was never equaled by another Clipper.

Ships like the "Flying Cloud" brought tea over regularly for Martin Gillet & Company, Inc., America's oldest tea importers.

To celebrate their 125th Anniversary, a famous Clipper Ship is packed in every carton of House of Lords Tea. This fine brand has been a favorite of Washington housewives for three generations. It is a Ceylon and India tea of highest quality. You'll find House of Lords Tea at all the better grocers.

How a Baby Grows

By Dr. Arnold Gesell, M. D.

The Second Three Months
Part One

Substitute Sweetheart

By Priscilla Wayne.

Chapter Thirty-Five.

They sat in the little outer waiting room talking it over together.

"I will tell him," Ruth said at last, quietly. "I guess, Mr. Reagan, that I've been a coward all along. First I was afraid for my life. And now I'm afraid—for my love."

"Don't worry, Ruth," Robert Reagan encouraged. "Tell Jim the honest truth. You're the girl he still loves. We'll have a wedding right here this afternoon. I've a hunch.

Ruth wiped her tears away unashamedly. "I'd be the happiest girl in the world if your hunch came true," Mr. Reagan.

A uniformed orderly came hurrying in. "Oh, I'm glad to find you here, Mr. Reagan, I thought I saw you leave the hospital. Some one from your office is very eager to talk to you right away."

"Where is the telephone?"

"Just at the end of the corridor."

"I'll be back in a minute or two," Mr. Reagan told Ruth, and he followed the hospital attendant from the room.

Jim Bradley's special nurse came out of her room, closed the door softly behind her. "He dropped right off to sleep," she told Ruth, "Guess his visit with you was a happy one."

"It was," Ruth admitted blushingly.

"He told me to tell you, Mrs. Bradley, that if you took a walk to make it a short one, please, because he's taking just a short nap and will be eager to see you the minute he opens his eyes."

Would Jim Love Her?

"I'll not go away at all," Ruth said. "I don't need to walk anyway. I'd rather stay here."

"All right. If he turns on his light, please go in," the nurse said, with the indulgence the returning strength of a patient always wins. "I'll just go down the corridor and be working on his chart."

Ruth's spirits mounted surprisingly. After all, perhaps what Mr. Reagan called his hunch would come true. Ruth loved Jim with all her heart. Maybe Jim loved her just as much.

He hadn't asked the June of long ago to marry him, had he? Perhaps, then, it was Ruth he loved, not June. Wasn't that fair reasoning? Ruth asked herself. Jim hadn't proposed to June, yet he'd seen her, vacationed with her, summer after summer.

Ruth grasped at every little crumb of hope. Surely Jim found lovable qualities in the girl who stood at his sick bed that he'd never discovered in the other girl.

Surely it meant that he wouldn't be too bitterly disappointed when she told him the truth and after the first shock of realization had worn away, the love so insistent and so tender that had flooded their hearts only this morning would reassert itself.

Robert Reagan came back into the room quickly. At the very first sight of him Ruth knew he brought interesting news.

"I've wonderful news," he declared, determined evidently to allay her anxiety at once. "First of all, your brother is alive and well."

Ruth's heart jumped joyously. Jerry alive, and safe! This, perhaps, was her lucky day. "Is he in Chicago? Where is he?"

"He's in Denver this morning. But he will soon be on his way here. Sit down and I'll tell you all they told me about it."

Then Robert Reagan relayed to his young and pretty client all the information that telephone conversation had given him.

"It seems when Joseph and Clara Bradley escaped they forced Jerry at the point of a gun to drive their car. They drove all the way to Denver, resting only when they parked the car on some secluded roadside."

"Poor Jerry!"

"Poor Jerry nothing! The boy was evidently keeping his eyes open. They went to a hut, away up in the mountains away from everybody. It seems that Bradley had had this hideaway ready."

"Then they planned this whole thing."

"Yes. Evidently they needed money desperately. Joseph Bradley was always the ne'er-do-well, but certainly no person ever thought him vicious. At least I did not."

"And my brother, Jerry, captured them?"

"Let me tell the story my own way, young lady. There was Pascoe, too, you know."

"I do know," Ruth acknowledged.

Took Chance.

"He knew of the hiding place and he met the Bradleys and your brother there. Your brother watched his chance, got the upper-hand of all of them."

"Jerry? All alone?"

"All alone, I guess. It seems he came down the mountain highway with them—all of them marching before him and tied together with a rope.

"That's all right, Ruth, go ahead and cry. I know you're crying because you're proud and happy. You've got the right to be. It was a marvelous show of courage and determination. There are rewards out for Pascoe, Joseph Bradley is wanted for murder—Clara, too. Clara was a former convict, you know, before she married Bradley. Your brother, Jerry, will be a hero all over the country."

"I am crying because I'm proud and happy," Ruth admitted, wiping away her tears. "Jerry's the best boy in all the world and he deserves all the luck that comes to him."

"Awake, I suppose," Mr. Reagan said, glancing toward the light just above Jim's door. "He's calling the nurse."

"I'll go," Ruth said, "the nurse told me to answer the light if he should call."

"Are you going to tell him, Ruth?"

"Yes."

She stood facing her companion for an instant, as though gaining courage and strength.

"Be proud, Ruth. You're giving Jim Bradey the finest thing in all the world, remember that. The love of a faithful wife is the greatest good that can come to any man."

"I do love him, Mr. Reagan, I do," Ruth whispered softly and then she turned, went slowly, courageously toward that closed door, while Robert Reagan waited outside.

Jim lay in his bed. The returning color of health flooded into his cheeks. He held out his arms to her.

"Jim, darling," Ruth said, dropping to his side. "Jim, I—I've got something to tell you and I've got to tell it to you quick or I'll lose my courage."

"Kiss me first," Jim whispered tenderly, his arms around her.

"Jim, I—I don't know how to begin, but I—I—oh, Jim, my name isn't June at all."

She stopped, breathless, her heart pounding. What would Jim say? What would Jim do?

Kissed Her!

Jim said plenty, Jim did plenty. First he kissed her many times. He held her very close.

And then he said a most surprising thing. "Dear, I've wondered for days what your name really is. I know it isn't June and I've wanted to ask."

"Jim—Jim—you knew?"

"Since almost the first day, darling."

"And you still love me? You love me in spite of everything?"

"I love you so much, little darling, that I can't wait. I just can't wait until you're really and truly my wife——"

"Jim—Jim, you knew the marriage wasn't a real one? You knew that, too?"

"Yes, sweetheart."

"And you aren't angry. You aren't disappointed?"

"I love you, darling. And the real June's going to love you, too.

"She's coming, Jim. She's on her way here right now. Mr. Reagan told me."

"I want to talk to Reagan, sweetheart. I want to get everything planned. There's going to be a wedding——"

"Oh, but Jim, I'm not ready," Ruth's voice broke with happiness.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

ONCE upon a time only the most luxurious of palaces had rugs . . . common people used sanded floors, bare polished stone floors, or even straw-strewn floors. Later bare-board floors came into fashion for humble homes, then rag rugs.

Although carpet weaving is an art that goes back to ancient Babylon and was perfected to its highest degree hundreds of years ago in Asia Minor, it remained for the American looms to make rugs of high quality available to everybody. The power carpet loom, which was invented by an American, was what revolutionized the industry, because it made it possible for the looms to produce a thick, rich wool-pile rug at a price that made it within the reach of the average income.

The advantages of standard rugs from the American looms are that their pile is warm and comfortable underfoot and it makes a quiet floor; an important point too, is that a room-size pile rug is safer than almost any other type of floor coverings and prevents many accidents from slipping. It is restful to walk on and pleasant to live with. On the whole it is probably the best average-use floor covering investment a woman can make because a good wool rug not only wears long and well, but it doesn't get dirty nearly so easily as a jaunty little cotton rug. In fact, the cotton rugs aren't to be recommended for any room that is going to get any continuous wear. Another asset of high-grade wool rugs with firm weave is that they don't wrinkle and kick up on the floor.

Frocks to Interest the Stag Line

The pink organdy frock at left has a natural flair for dancing—long, flowing lines, which permit of grace and ease. The wide pleated bertha-like collar is flattering to the slim girl and the skirt repeats the pleated band medium of trimming. For informal dancing, the Dubonnet sheer at the right is suggested. Being a tunic-dress, it is correct as to style, and its lines are attuned to dancing steps. White embroidered organdy, fashions the collar and extends the length of the tunic. It Isn't Your Feet That Are Out of Tune, It's Probably Your Clothes, Says Master

The Smart Dresses Is the Smoth Dancer, in Thayer's Opinion.

IF DANCING to you is a big headache, if you think you have no rhythm and your feet and brains do not co-operate even to the melodies of the best swing orchestra in town, it may not be you at all but the way you dress—and the way your dress affects your personality. This suggestion is advanced by Leroy H. Thayer, vice president of the Dancing Masters' Association of America, who has taught many of the Capital's leading citizens to appear at ease in the ballroom.

"As you dress as you dance," says Mr. Thayer. "The loud overdressed person is the erratic showy danger. The smart dresser is the smooth attractive dancer. The type of clothing worn has an effect on dancing. Women's gowns and dreses should hang loosely from the hips allowing freedom for their activities on the floor. I cannot help but feel that, what a women might possibly add to style with a tight skirt or gown, she sacrifices to comfort and enjoyment on a ballroom floor. It seems to me that, with thousands of stylists designing clothes these days, it should be possible that smart clothes should permit smart dancing."

Wearing the right clothes on the ballroom floor is a two-fold solution of the wall-flower problem, Mr. Thayer believes. Not only do such clothes make for better dancing but also for more self-confidence. And possession of that quality is the first step toward success in the ballroom.

"At the root of poor dancing, as at the root of most things," says Mr. Thayer, "we find shyness and fear. These obstacles may be overcome by learning to dance properly. Feeling one's power to dance is a real asset socially and commercially." Self-confidence in all activities may very well be built from it.

Another dancing secret—do not imagine that fluent conversation is essential to dancing popularity, Mr. Thayer believes emphatically that the two things do not mix. "Conversation with dancing has no place" he says "and may well be a handicap rather than an asset."

Age No Barrier.

In Washington, where social life is most important, the question of whether middle aged or elderly persons should attempt to learn to dance frequently arises. Mr. Thayer believes age is no barrier to the enjoyment of dancing.

"Great physical exertion is unimportant in ballroom dancing—poor taste, in fact," he says. "A person at 50 has the same feeling for music and the same desire to express that feeling as does a younger person. The added years do not and should not be considered a handicap. In fact, the stimulation from dancing is a pleasure we may enjoy more fully in middle age than in youth—when such exercise is taken as a matter of course. Anyone, at any age, may learn to dance to his own satisfaction and enjoy it."

Expert Says Age Is No Barrier to Enjoyment of Ballroom.

Sandpaper Fastener.

To fasten a food chopper securely place a piece of sandpaper with the rough side to the table before tightening the screw.

Cleaning Greasy Pans.

A burnt or greasy pan may be washed more easily if one inch of water and one teaspoon or more of soda is brought to a boil in the pan before attempting to wash it.

Silver Cleaning Tip.

Silver may be cleaned by immersing in 1 gallon of water to which 1 tablespoon table salt and 1 teaspoon of soda have been added. Rinse silver and dry thoroughly.

Onion Juice.

To extract juice from an onion cut a slice from the bottom of the onion and twist the onion on a grater.

Sane Restraint Urged to Curb Juvenile Crime

Parents Often to Blame for Child Lawlessness Through Laxity.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

ONE-FIFTH of all the crimes committed in America today are said to be the work of boys from 15 to 20 years old.

One may cite the living conditions of slums and big cities as an excuse. But slums have always existed, often in worse form than would seem possible today. Furthermore, a large percentage of these young criminals do not come from the slums.

Of course there is always the depression to fall back on. But there have been depressions before which did not produce quite such a crop of youthful ne'er-do-wells.

Parents Often to Blame.

There are many contributing causes to the existent lawlessness among the young, but some of the blame at least must be laid on the shoulders of the parents, who, often to suit their own convenience, have permitted and fostered a freedom among the children which amounts to license.

There was a time, for example, when children were taught to look on liquor with respect. They could not buy it over the counter, nor were they supposed t. know how to use it. Today it is not unusual for a father or mother to ask a girl or boy of 14 or thereabouts to mix the cocktails or highballs for the crowd. The children are, to be sure, not supposed to join in the drinking, but it will not be long before the little mixer will be getting his drink too.

Sane Restraints Urged.

Familiarity destroys respect, and liquor, like other adult privileges, should be respected if it is to be used intelligently.

fere with youth's initiative and

Too much restraint may inter- self-confidence, but too little makes the youngsters contemptuous of all authority. Parents often pride themselves on tolerance and understanding, but in many cases these vaunted virtues are merely a lazy man's defense against the intelligent use of control and guidance.

Woman's Mind Held to Change Less Readily

Men change their minds more easily than do women, according to a study made by Prof. Clifford Kirkpatrick of the University of Minnesota sociology department. His study is presented in the current issue of the American Journal of Sociology.

Two questionnaires, designed to test attitudes on feminism, were given to 150 college students by Prof. Kirkpatrick. The first questionnaire was answered individually. Then the class was divided into "committees," each consisting of one member of each sex. The second set of questions, an alternative form of the first set, was then handed to the students, with instructions to discuss the questions freely with their partners and to record the joint opinion agreed upon.

On comparing the two test forms it was found that the girls became less feministic and the boys became more feministic. However, the boys changed their opinions to a greater degree after discussion than did the girls.

Collective opinion, where free discussion is allowed, is less extreme than individual opinion, Prof. Kirkpatrick suggests. The men were more affected by contact with the feminine point of view than were the women by contract with the masculine point of view, but members of both sexes were more moderate in their views after hearing the other side of the question.

"The interpretation, pending further evidence, must depend to a considerable extent upon personal bias," concludes Prof. Kirkpatrick.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

The Service of Our Hospitals.

Hospitals are ancient institutions. At first called "hostels," they were wayside spots on main traveled routes where the weary and sick might rest and receive food and comfort. When epidemic disease swept the land these hostels became "spitals" and were given over to the care of plague-stricken victims. Religious orders dedicated themselves to service in these "hospitals."

Although poorhouses had been founded earlier, the first general house for the sick in the United States was the Pennsylvania hospital of Philadelphia, in which Benjamin Franklin was interested. The second was the New York hospital. Both of these establishments have enjoyed a continuous existence since their eighteenth century beginnings.

In some quarters there is a misconception that many of these institutions are conducted as commercial ventures, and no small amount of adverse criticism has been leveled against their charges. Few of us realize the wide difference between an ordinary business and that of the care of the sick. Hospitals operate 24 hours each day and three units of employes are required, each with an eight-hour tour of duty. They must be as ready to carry out any needed procedure at 2 o'clock in the morning as at 2 in the afternoon.

Furthermore, there can be no let-up in watchfulness at any moment from the time the patient enters until he is discharged. We can readily understand the contrast in cost of maintenance could such organizations open for business at 9 o'clock and close at 5. Then, too, expensive types of equipment that may be required but once a month or even less often must be at hand, for when the occasion arises the need is imperative and no makeshift will answer. Usually the per diem charge is but little more than that of equally comfortable hotel accommodations. In addition, general nursing care, diets, routine medicines and costly supplies are furnished.

It is the objective of every hospital worthy of the name to contribute as large a proportion of charity service as may be needed. However, watchfulness is demanded against what appears to be a growing tendency—to expect something for nothing—in other words, the encouragement of mendicancy must be guarded against.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Distracted Wife of Alcoholic Addict Asks Suggestion for Helping Husband Overcome Habit.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A year or more ago a letter was printed in your column from a from who told of having been a heavy drinker and of having cured himself. He offered to make known his cure to others. Would it be possible for you to put me in communication with him? My husband has been drinking so heavily that he is about to lose his job. He is a good man when sober, but when drunk—which is about two-thirds of the time nowadays—he is a beast. I am so desperate with worry that I am almost incapable of writing coherently . . . Thanking you for any help you can give me, I am, sincerely yours. A. D. I.

Will to Be Cured Must Be Roused.

DEAR A. D. I.: The aforementioned correspondent gave the name of a patent medicine, so called, to which he ascribed his own cure from the drink habit. What the merits of this patent medicine are, I am not prepared to say. However, I am inclined to believe it was the will to be cured which brought about his redemption, rather than any magic qualities contained in the patent medicine. Until the will to be cured is roused in your husband, there is little if anything that anyone can do to help him. The old-time theory of the miraculous potion administered in the morning cup of coffee has long since been exploded, I believe. At least, I am sure no first-rate physician would give it much credence.

The will to be cured might be roused in your husband by his employer's having a blunt talk with him and telling him he is to be given one more chance, and only one, to pull himself together and that if he doesn't avail himself of this chance, he will be discharged. You might make a confidential appeal to his employer to have such a talk with him. Since he is about to lose his job anyway, it could do no harm and might result in some good.

* * * *

I should like to have you read a book called "Asylum," written by William Seabrook. In this book, Author Seabrook gives a detailed account of his own cure from the drink habit. When he found he could no longer control his appetite for drink; was, in fact, wrecking his life and his mind by drinking, he deliberately had himself committed to an institution for the mentally ill. In the end he emerged from the institution a sane man, completely freed from the devil-fish clutches of this destroying habit. This book might be a source of encouragement, inspiration and guidance to both yourself and your husband in this emergency. I suggest you read it and pass it along to your husband to read. M. H.

In Re "Worried Aunt."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The letter from "Worried Aunt" in your column of May 6, telling about an 18-year-old niece who defies her mother by staying out all hours of the night, has aroused my interest. I wish to submit here a recital of how my mother dealt with this situation when I was a young girl eager to try my wings.

* * * *

Of course, I must admit there was a wonderful understanding between my mother and me and that there were no secrets between us. I remember when I was quite small my mother would say to me that she would never punish me so long as I told the truth, and telling the truth got to be such a habit that I could no more do wrong without confessing to her than I could live without breathing.

When I arrived at the age where I sometimes stayed out quite late with young men we had several long talks on the subject and mother made sure I understood the situation. Then she put a latch key in my hand and said she trusted me. She never inquired needlessly or fussily into my actions, and it never entered my head to betray her trust. I always felt I carried her blessing and her faith in me wherever I went.

* * * *

I remember once a young man and I foolishly missed a last bus home after a tramp in the country and had to spend most of the night marching home. Mother was not angry with me, although she had been very anxious. She felt, however, that she had to take the young man to task, which she did very gently. The young man was not accustomed to being taken to task and ever since has stood in great awe of my mother. Certainly we never missed a last bus again!

Yours sincerely, H. M.

* * * *

DEAR H. M.: Thank you for your letter. I wish every mother-daughter relationship might be as pleasant as this. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Officials, Wives Plan June Trips To Conventions

Philadelphia and Cleveland Are in Spotlight for Capital Leaders.

By Dudley Harmon.

Another spring, but this time it's a convention year, and Cleveland and Philadelphia hold the spotlight usually focused on Newport and points north at this season. Already members of the Cabinet, Senators, Representatives and their wives are making plans to attend the Republican and Democratic convention, as are many others not in official life.

For the first time in history, a Vice President will attend a convention in an official capacity. Mr. Garner, national committeeman from Texas, as well as vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, will be accompanied to Philadelphia by Mrs. Garner. He will break another precedent by remaining for the notification ceremony to take place immediately after the convention, something no other Vice President has done before.

Mrs. Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, who rarely misses a convention, will head the Cabinet wives at Philadelphia. Others going from Cabinet ranks are the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau, the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings and the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper.

Official hostess at the Democratic rally will be Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, who will return from Bermuda in time for the convention. If and when the Republicans decide to appoint a hostess, Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, vice chairman of the Republican National Committee, will be their choice.

Mrs. Carroll Miller, sister of Senator Joseph Guffey, will go to Philadelphia several days in advance to see that everything is in readiness for the delegates. As a member of the committee on arrangements, she was partly responsible for the choice of Philadelphia as the convention city when the Democratic National Committee met last January. Mrs. Miller, who incidentally is national committeewoman from Pennsylvania, will be accompanied by her brother and her two sisters, the Misses Ida and Pauletta Guffey.

Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., who is remaining another week in Atlanta, Ga., where she went for the horse show, will attend her first convention when she goes to Philadelphia next month with her husband. In the same party will be Mr. and Mrs. Forbes Morgan and the latter's father, Mr. Robert Jackson.

Mrs. Frederick Steiwer, wife of Senator Steiwer, will be on hand to hear her husband make his keynote speech at the Republican convention, as will be Mrs. Alben Barkley, keynoter for the Democrats. Mrs. Bertrand H. Snell, whose husband, the Representative from New York, is chairman of the Republican convention, also will attend the convention.

One of the few women going from Washington as a delegate is Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, wife of Representative Bacon, of New York. A Landon enthusiast, she has for months been touring her State rounding up votes for the party.

National Power Policy Framed At Conference

President, Leaders Agree; Composite Bill Will Be Drafted at Once.

By the Associated Press.

The groundwork was laid at a White House conference yesterday for what was described as a new national power policy to govern the distribution and sale of electricity generated at large federally constructed dams.

Senators and Administration officials announced after conferring with President Roosevelt they would work out a composite bill governing the disposition of surplus power at the Grand Coulee and Bonneville Dams on the Columbia River ni the Northwest.

This would embrace a new declaration of policy, it was said, intended to be flexible enough to permit of adaptation to other dams already built, such as Boulder, on the Colorado River, and those to be constructed in the future.

Senators McNary, of Oregon, the Republican leader, and Bone and Schwellenbach, Washington Democrats, authors of Columbia River bills of varying provisions, attended the conference.

They said afterward they would meet later with officials of the Federal Power Commission, TVA, Rural Electrification Administration and Army Engineers to work out a consolidated measure from those pending and from ideas advanced by the National Resources Board.

Officials of all these agencies were present at yesterday's conference. They included Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, chief of Army Engineers; Dr. Arthur E. Mogan and David E. Lilienthal, of the TVA; Frederic A. Delano, of the Resources Board; Morris L. Cooke, head of REA, and Basil Manly, of the power commission.

Bone said the bill, to be pressed for enactment this session, would contain language to permit adoption of price formulas for years to come.

The power commission, it was indicated, would be authorized to make adjustments in rates in various areas to meet changing conditions.

One provision to be included, Schwellenbach said, would empower the commission to adjust rates for power now being sold at Boulder Dam. The Washington Senator said these rates were now "impracticable and outmoded," as they were based on production costs at steam plants at Los Angeles.

Booster Group Starts Drive; $50,000 Is Goal

Subscriptions to Advertise City Called Investment by Siddons.

With $50,000 as its goal, the Greater National Capital Committee yesterday launched its sixth annual campaign for funds with a luncheon at the Willard Hotel. Throughout the year the committee's efforts are directed to attracting visitors, conventions and permanent residents to Washington.

"I want to emphasize strongly that subscriptions to the campaign should not be regarded as contributions, but are sound investments that will be a material benefit to all in the community," workers in the drive were told by Frederic P. H. Siddons, campaign chairman.

The group also heard Edgar Morris, newly elected president of the Board of Trade, parent organization of the Greater National Capital Committee. He predicted the $50,000 goal would be attained.

Serving with Siddons on the campaign committee are Francis G. Addison, treasurer; Robert J. Cottrell, secretary, and Floyd D. Akers, David S. Bethune, B. B. Burgunder, Lee D. Butler, Austin F. Canfield, James E. Colliflower, John H. Davis, W. W. Everett, E. M. Graham, John D. Green, Thomas J. Groom, Granville Gude, Arthur J. Hartnett, Joseph D. Cripples minutes to decide whether they would accept the transportation, at the same time barring them further admission to the WPA headquarters.

The request for an interview with the President was made after an hour-long conference with WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, in which the delegation of four members of the group presented demands for 5,000 jobs, a permanent relief program for the physically handicapped and a Nation-wide census of the physically handicapped undertaken by themselves with WPA funds.

Hopkins Rejects Demands.

Although Hopkins rejected these three demands, he left the way wide open for future action by suggesting that they furnish them statistical proof that the crippled are being discriminated against under the work relief program. "If you prepare a thesis that will show such discrimination," Hopkins declared, "I will correct those conditions at once."

In rejecting the request for an interview with the President, Marvin McIntyre, President's secretary, also left the door open for a "petition or memorandum" that the group might wish to submit.

McIntyre's letter, stating that because of the pressing demands on the President's time in the closing weeks of Congress no interview with the President could be arranged, was delivered to Sylvia Slexer, the president of the delegation at the Hotel Harrington at 4:55 p. m. In less than half an hour after the group had received Forsberger's 5:15 ultimatum.

In his letter McIntyre wrote in part:

"I am informed that you have discussed the entire situation with Administrator Hopkins.

Assured of Interest.

"In view of the President's long and sincere interest in the problem of physically handicapped persons, you may rest assured that any constructive suggestions you may have will be given his personal consideration and study.

"Frankly, I do not see that any oral discussion of this problem between you and me would serve any useful purpose. Certainly it will not be nearly so effective as for me to brng to his attention any communication from you."

The conference with Hopkins opened in a jovial spirit, with the administrator submitting genially to what amounted to a cross-examination by Henry Friedman, one of the delegates, on whether or not the WPA was doing its share for the physically handicapped.

As the conference wore on, Friedman's questioning grew sharper. Hopkins' replies grew more impatient. Finally Hopkins broke up the conference. He walked out. Mrs. Flexer was still talking when he left. Major point of disagreement between Hopkins and the delegation was whether or not the WPA was discriminating against the physically handicapped.

Among the members of Congress the delegation interviewed were Senators Benson, Borah and Frazier and Represetnatives Sirovich and Maverick. When the delegation returns for its second visit, it was announced, one of its aims will be to see Senators Wagner and Copeland, both from New York.

On their arrival Saturday morning, the group sent the truck they came in back to New York. Dissatisfied with their reception by Thad Holt, deputy administrator, and Nels Anderson, head of the labor relations section, the group took over WPA offices on the seventh floor of the Walker-Johnson Building, refusing to leave until they could present their demands to Hopkins in person.

After a 24-hour siege that won them a promise of an interview with Hopkins yesterday morning, they evacuated their stronghold. Food and lodging were supplied them by Aubrey Williams, deputy WPA administrator, with the cooperation of M. Alice Hill, director of the public assistance division of the local board of public welfare.

Capper Plans Fight to Save Alley Agency

To Offer Amendment to Restore Funds Cut by House.

Social Council Votes Protest on Slash; City Items Pass.

Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, will move to save the Alley Dwelling Authority as soon as the Senate Appropriations Committee starts hearings on the deficiency bill which passed the House yesterday.

Capper, ranking minority member of the Senate District Committee and a member of the Appropriations Committee, said he will offer an amendment to restore the $300,000 Budget Bureau estimate slashed from the bill by the House committee.

The Council of Social Agencies yesterday adopted unanimously a resolution protesting the curtailment of A. D. A. funds by the House committee. The resolution was submitted by Walter S. Ufford, of the council's housing committee.

As author of the organic act of the slum clearance agency, Capper said that the House sub-committee members who insisted that the $500,000 initial appropriation was intended as a revolving fund for the ten-year tenure of the authority are in error.

Just a Beginner.

"That $500,000 was intended just for a beginner," Capper said. "It was fully understood that Congress would make additional appropriations."

Capper said that he would try to arrange for Washington civic spokesmen and housing agencies to appear before the Senate deficiency sub-committee when hearings begin on the bill.

"We can't let this fine work stop now," he said. "It's just beginning."

Chairman Buchanan, of the House Appropriations Committee, insisted during hearings before his committee that Congress never intended that the Alley Dwelling Authority should receive more than $500,000.

Cites McCarl Ruling.

John Ihlder, A. D. A. administrator, pointed out that the comptroller general had ruled to the contrary in approving a PWA grant of $200,000.

The House yesterday passed the deficiency bill without making any changes in the items affecting the District.

Local appropriations aggregated $888,688.74, which was $84,278.03 under Budget Bureau recommendations. The largest single item in this list is $100,000 for the District's share of the unemployment insurance fund.

The bill also carried $200,000 for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and authority to spend an unexpended balance of $800,000 for the purchase of park lands.

A total of $5,500,000 is provided for the continuation of Federal building projects in the city of Washington.

Lo—The Poor Indian!

Congress Is Blamed by Indians Here to Ask for Lands in West

Representatives of 60,000 Appeal to 'Great White Fathers;' Collier Says Requests Are Justified; Redmen Deplore Lack of Vote.

Men of a race which roamed the Western plains in freedom a thousand years before a wallowing sailboat landed the first English colonist at Jamestown in 1609 are in town to ask Congress for land.

They are Indians of three tribes of the sun-baked lands of the Southwest. Once the whole Nation was theirs. That was before the white man came. Now they must ask for land.

They did not come to beg—they are men of a proud race. They came to present their problems squarely before the men who make the Nation's laws.

High on the tenth floor of the Hurley-Wright Building, they met with John Collier, commissioner of Indian affairs, yesterday afternoon, and mapped out their campaign to regain land they claim they must have.

"Else we will die like buffalo."

Charles Kie, of Arizona's Laguna tribe of Pueblos, spoke for the 12,000 Indian men and women he is representing here. He sat in a chair next to Collier, dressed like anyone else would dress. But his face was bronze, his cheeks were high. He sat erect and spoke in the language white men have taught him on the reservation:

"We must have more land. The land is overgrazed. Congress must do something about it. We are progressing. Our population is rising.

"Our fathers hunted half a year and engaged in agriculture the other half. Now the game is gone. The white man took it . . ."

The other Indians nodded. They were grouped around in a circle. Their faces were serious and they looked straight ahead with immobile expressions.

"Now they are taking our land. We must raise crops. We must have some way to live."

Collier spoke and the Indians listened intently, but they never moved.

"They have come here," he explained, "to get the land they need. Three tribes are represented here—Navajos, Hoppes, Pueblos. The Government is taking their land away from them constantly. They must have some way to live. They take better care of their land now than anybody in the States they're from. They farm according to the most advanced methods. But pasture land is overgrazed. They can't raise cattle. They just don't have enough land—that's all there is to it . . ."

The Indians nodded assent. It was like a council of war. But these Indians are of peaceful races. While the tribes of the East clicked one stone against another to make rude implements of stone, these Indians were working with silver. While other tribes shouted war whoops through the woods of the East, these tribes raised cattle and lived a peaceful life in the country hard by the Mexican border.

Pablo Abeita—on his fingers were beautiful rings his people made, on his back was a lace shirt, exquisitely embroidered that his people sewed—spoke:

"We've been here since before old man Columbus had any grandparents."

Even at the joke, his lips never creased a smile. His eyes didn't twinkle. The other Indians, too, stared straight ahead.

One of them twitched his toes in mocassins. He wore his home-made shoes here. Another fingered a ring of tourquoise he wore. And the talk of the land they needed went on.

They told of their plans to give three conferences for Senators and Representatives. The meetings will be held in the auditorium in the Department of the Interior.

All of them were educated—these men who have become wards of the Government. The Nation has sent men and women to teach them. They have learned to read and write and add and subtract. They have learned to raise corn by the white man's methods, cook by his recipes. They even read philosophy.

They would sit in silence and listen and then break out in perfect English:

"We blame Congress. The present Administration has been thoughtful. But Congress—they pass the laws. Even our own Senators are against us, because if the Government buys more lands for our needs the State will lose taxes. They think it's against their interests to buy us land."

Court's Ruling Delivers Blow To Bootleggers

Sims Loses Appeal After Conviction on Untaxed Liquor Charge.

Washington's bootleggers were dealt a severe blow yesterday when the United States Court of Appeals handed down a triple-faced opinion holding that they can be tried under both the liquor-taxing act of 1934 and the alcohol beverage control act, and may be given indeterminate sentences.

The appellate court made its ruling in an appeal by Corlis Sims, who was convicted of having in his possession a small quantity of untaxed liquor. He was sentenced to four months in jail.

Later he was indicted in District Supreme Court for violation of the liquor-taxing act, with the same small quantity of liquor forming the basis of the charges. Convicted of the second charge, which was in two counts, Sims was sentenced to serve from one to three years. He appealed on the grounds he had been subjected to double jeopardy for the same offense.

The court held that the two laws, the alcohol beverage control act and the liquor-taxing act were different in effect since one was for revenue and the other was for control of the liquor industry and that both were applicable to Sims.

Sims also challenged his sentence on the theory that there was discrimination, since, had he been a resident of one of the States, both laws would not have applied, the control act being peculiar to Washington. The appellate court ruled, however, that "discrimination" applied only to race, color or creed, and not to the various States or possessions and was not in fact discriminatory.

Cathedral Funds Sought in Drive

Lloyd B. Wilson, president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., last night opened a drive for maintenance funds for Washington Cathedral.

Wilson, who is general chairman of the campaign committee, outlined the needs of the Cathedral at a meeting in the refectory of St. Alban's School.

He explained to the members of the committee the drive to re-enroll the 500 members of the National Cathedral Association who had been forced to drop their membership during the depression.

Other speakers were Edwin N. Lewis, executive secretary of the Cathedral; Mrs. Charles Warren, chairman of the women's committee; H. L. Rust, jr., vice chairman of the campaign committee, and Bishop James E. Freeman, who made an inspirational address.

Dividend Checks Await Depositors

Although funds now are awaiting them in the form of a second dividend declared by the Franklin Liquidating Trust, more than 13,500 depositors of the closed Franklin National Bank have not called for their money, it was learned yesterday.

The statement came from Samuel M. Thrift, secretary of the trust, which maintains a special office at 721 Tenth street.

Certificates of participation are necessary as identification before the checks can be turned over to depositors, it was pointed out yesterday. The second dividend amounts to 25 per cent of the unpaid balance of the original deposit in the old Franklin National Bank.

North Pole Not Icebergs' Home, Avers Stefansson, In Talk Here

Icebergs originate closer to England than to the North Pole, Dr. Vilhjalmer Stefanson, the explorer, told the Graphic Arts Technical Conference last night.

Speaking on "The Standardization of Error" at the Wardman Park Hotel dinner, he exploded several popular beliefs, but conceded he might as well save his breath rather than try to enlighten the public.

He poked fun at certain reputable scientists for fixing the North Pole area as the birthplace of icebergs. The bergs, he said, actually form near Greenland.

"It would be better for all concerned," he suggested, "if we could manage to standardize our misinformation."

He amused his listeners with an account of his efforts to shatter the legend about the ostrich burying his head in the sand to hide from his enemies.

Stefanson related how he asked a California ostrich breeder if his birds bored in the sand when frightened. The Westerner admitted his ostriches did not, but insisted wild birds did.

In his research, the explorer said, he found literary references to such a custom dating from 50 B. C. Nevertheless, he added, a South American newspaper had no takers when it offered a reward to anyone who could produce an ostrich with the head burying habit.

Wolves, Stefanson said, don't run in packs, popular belief to the contrary. The story probably originated when someone saw a mother wolf airing a few pups.

Ruling Curbs Police Court Judge Trials

Accused's Right to Jury Asserted if Penalty Is 90 Days in Jail.

Appeals Court Decides in 2 Cases; Far-Reaching Effects Forecast.

In a ruling that is expected to have a far reaching effect on Police Court procedure, the United States Court of Appeals in two opinions yesterday affirmed the right of trial by jury to persons accused of a crime for which they might be sentenced to 90 days in jail.

The first ruling was handed down in the appeal of Ethel Clawans, who had been convicted in Police Court of reselling a railroad excursion ticket without a locense. The other involved Pearl Blackburn, who was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and serve 90 days in jail.

In an opinion written by Associate Justice D. Lawrence Groner, the Appellate Court held that "to inflict upon the accused, summarily, imprisonment in a common jail for that length of time and at the same time to deny him right of appeal to a court of record, is a matter which cannot be whistled down the wind with the statement that court business must go on—that dockets must be celared—or that requirements of jury service should not be expanded to the loss of the citizen in his private affairs."

For these reasons we are of the opinion that the Constitutional provisions with relation to jury trial apply, first in all cases—especially in all cases where, as here, there is no election of right and no appeal of right, in which the offense charged was an indictable offense under the common law, without regard to the measure of punishment; and second, in all cases, without regard to the nature of the offense, where the punishment which may be inflicted under the statute involves a sentence as severe as confinement in jail for 90 days."

The opinion is expected to greatly retard the speedy dispatch with which hundreds of cases are disposed of in Police Court under a "trial by judge" system. As matters stand now, the Police Court judges are under compulsion to grant the privilege of jury trials in every case in which the penalty could be 90 days or more.

Present Rules To Curb Noise Held Ample

Drive for New Laws Is Dealt Setback by Thomas' Opinion.

Only Enforcement Is Necessary, Asserts Col. Sultan.

The drive for new police regulations forbidding noises was dealt somewhat of a blow yesterday in an opinion of Edward W. Thomas, assistant corporation counsel and committee member.

"There are on the books and now in force all the regulations needed to proceed against loud and unnecessary noises," Thomas said.

Announcement of his opinion was made by the assistant corporation counsel following a study of the special anti-noise laws recently enacted in New York as a part of the anti-noise campaign of Mayor Fiorella H. LaGuardia there.

There is a broad and general District regulation against loud and unnecessary noises at night, which has been in effect for several years, Thomas pointed out. There also are special regulations against loud radios at night, street vendors, automobile horn blowing and other annoyances, as well as more general provisions against anything which constitutes a nuisance.

William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic and committee chairman, had proposed enactment of a regulation which would have prohibited blowing of horns on private automobiles for any purpose whatever from 11 p. m. until 7 a. m. This was indefinitely laid aside by the Commissioners.

Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, when informed of Thomas' opinion, said he believed there were sufficient regulations already on the books and the question was one of enforcement.

"I certainly am in favor of enforcement by the police," the colonel said. "There's no reason why some man should sit out in his automobile and annoy a whole neighborhood tooting his horn to get his wife to come out from some bridge party. If the police made a determined effort to enforce existing regulations the useless and needless noises in the city could be reduced at once very materially."

Highest Court Gets Plea in Boy's Death

The mother of an 18-year-old messenger boy, who lost his life in a fall down an elevator shaft in the Washington Building, 1005 E street northwest, more than two years ago, brought an appeal before the United States Supreme Court yesterday.

Frederick Davis, the youth, was killed almost instantly on December 29, 1933. His mother, Mrs. Cinderella Davis, asked the highest tribunal to rule that she could sue Joseph Ruzicka, of Washington, in the Maryland State courts under the District of Columbia death claim law.

Asserting her son was the sole support of her and several children, she asked $10,000.

Ruzicka was said to have operated a book bindery on the upper floors of the building, where the messenger, his arm full of packages, stepped into the elevator shaft.

First, Mrs. Davis brought suit in a State court at Baltimore, which dismissed her claim without trial by ruling that death claim laws of Maryland and the District differed. The Maryland Appeals Court approved this dismissal.

Because she is without funds, Mrs. Davis asked the highest court to consider her appeal without payment of the usual court costs.

Secretary Marries Employer

Mr. and Mrs. Laurence R. Wilder, after their marriage yesterday. Wilder, a well-known engineer, formerly headed the New York Shipbuilding Co., and is now chairman of the board of Gulf Industries. The bride was his secretary.

L. R. Wilder, Noted Engineer And Inventor, Weds Secretary

Former New York Shipbuilder Marries Judy Kitchen, Who Testified Before Senate Munitions Committee Last Year.

Laurence R. Wilder, 48-year-old former head of the New York Shipbuilding Co., now chairman of the board of Gulf Industries, Pensacola, Fla., yesterday married his secretary, slim, dark-eyed Judy Kitchen, of Erie, Pa.

In their rooms at a downtown hotel, the young secretary posed proudly for cameramen beside her tall husband, who has been her employer for four years.

Mrs. Wilder said she would continue to be her husband's secretary, but added she intends to do "a little bossing for a change."

"Just now," she said, "I'm thinking of getting some brass knuckles—I ought to have some advantage."

Wilder met his bride four years ago through her uncle, J. J. Desmond, of Carry, Pa., a business associate. He hired for his secretary.

The 25-year-old bride was in the limelight last year when she testified before the Senate Munitions Committee in January. At that time both she and her employer charged major shipbuilding companies with collusion in obtaining naval construction awards.

Mrs. Wilder told the committee she attended a conference in a downtown hotel room where a man, who said he could "chisel" $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 in naval contracts for a $250,000 fee made an offer to them.

The marriage was performed in the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church by the Rev. Albert Evans.

The marriage was Wilder's second. He married Dorothee Richardson, of Boston, Mass., in 1924. Last August she sued for divorce at Reno, Nev., charging desertion since 1933, and was awarded $12,000 yearly alimony.

Wilder, a wel known electrical engineer and inventor, has held high positions in many corporations. In 1907 he built the first small internal combustion motor for the Aero Motor Co., of Chicago. He also developed a magnto, now used as standard equipment on all aircraft, for the Scintilla Megneto Co., of New York, in 1925.

In 1925, Wilder organized the American Brown Boweri Electric Corporation, which acquired the New York Shipbuilding Co., the Condit Electrical Manufacturing Co. and the Moloney Electric Co. He became president of the Boveri company and later chairman of its advisory committee on shipbuilding.

Orchestra War Ends; National Gets River Site

Sponsor of Rival Musical Group Withdraws Bid for Water Gate.

Rivalry for the "sunset symphony" site at the Water Gate between the National Symphony and an orchestra sponsored by Fairfax Oyster, Washington businessman, has ended, it was learned last night.

In a letter to The Washington Post, Oyster said that he had informed C. Marshall Finnan, director of National Capital Parks, to disregard his request for permission to use the Water Gate.

Oyster said that he had been told by an officer of the National Symphony that the symphony definitely would give concerts at the site this summer.

It was learned from the National Symphony that disagreement between the orchestra and the local musicians union was still holding up definite plans for the summer concerts, which last year brought thousands to the banks of the Potomac.

If the orchestra association and the musicians are able to compose their differences, which include the union's protest against the bringing in of outside musicians and the association's disapproval of the discharge of the personnel manager of the orchestra, the first concert will be held on July 9, it was said.

Promised difficulties in securing a barge from which the orchestra will play have been eliminated, it was learned from the association.

Mrs. McKinnon, 84, Dies at Residence

Mrs. Marie M. McKinnon, 84, died here yesterday at her home, 1400 Chapin street northwest.

Mrs. McKinnon was a native of Switzerland. She came to this country in her youth and lived many years in Texas and Illinois before coming to Washington.

Surviving are William C. McKinnon, Charles D. McKinnon, of Uniontown, Pa., and T. J. McKinnon, of Lakehurst, N. J. She was the widow of James D. McKinnon, pressman in the Government Printing Office.

Church Gift Again Splits Citizen Group

$25 Not Yet Returned by Baptists to Congress Heights Association.

Rebates From Original $125 Donations Made by Three Others.

Action of the Congress Heights Citizens Association in giving a $500 surplus from its treasury to four neighborhood churches rebounded again a second time in controversy at the association's meeting last night.

The original action of splitting up the $500 among the churches was taken about a year ago when Dr. E. E. Richardson, pastor of one of the churches which benefited, the Congress Heights Baptist Church, was president of the association.

The money, residue of a fund used for maintenance of a swimming pool at Camp Sims, was voted to the churches, but opposition soon developed from some members who threatened to take the matter to court.

Peace Was Restored.

However, peace was restored when it was agreed that each of the four churches return $25 of the $125 they received, the money to go to the Congress Heights School's Parent-Teacher Association.

The other churches receiving the money were the Catholic Church of the Assumption, Ester Memorial Episcopal Church and the Congress Heights Methodist Church. These three returned $25, it was said at the meeting last night, but no return was made by Dr. Richardson's church.

It was this that brought the controversy up against last night, it was said.

At the meeting, E. J. Read, new president of the group, quoted the pastor as saying that he did not believe his church "would want to give up the money at this time."

Vote for Rebate.

J. Louis Gelbman, a member of the association and one who had objected to the original gifts, then introduced a resolution which would have given Dr. Richardson 72 hours in which to return the $25.

The resolution, however, was voted down, 7 to 6.

Then, the group decided that if one of the four churches was not going to pay the $25 the other three should have their rebate returned. A resolution to this effect was adopted.

A resolution was adopted that a letter be sent to the Speaker of the House asking that the Sisson bill be brought up on the floor of the House as soon as possible.

The association voted to have a social meeting in June.

3 Youths Seized After $34 Robbery

Three Negro youths were arrested last night and jailed for investigation less than half an hour after they allegedly robbed a gas station at Eighteenth and Hamlin streets northeast of $34 and escaped in a stolen car.

John H. Page, station operator, last night identified the youths as the three who held him off at the point of a .32-caliber pistol and robbed the station.

According to Page, the youths drove up to the station. Then one of them drew the pistol. He threw up his hands and they relieved him of his change box.

They were captured at Ninth street and Michigan avenue northeast. Police last night had not located the owner of the car they drove.

Woman Loses $600 To Purse-Snatcher

Early yesterday Julian Valentine, Negro woman, walked up to the postoffice and drew out all her savings.

She stuffed $600 in bills into her purse.

Into a grocery store shestarted, down at Ninth and H streets northeast. Along came a "ginger colored" Negro and grabbed her phrse. He ray away.

Julia, who lives at 649 Seventh street northeast, ran after him, but her running wasn't as fast as his.

Police were looking for the man and $600 today.

Good Morning

If you picture an unstarched, unironed shirt as the last word in what the well-dressed beachcomber will wear, you haven't seen the new "Windsor Crepe" shirts. They have "beachcomber" comfort, to be sure, but they also have a very decided man-about-town appearance. Pajamas, ties and shorts are great ideas in "Windsor Crepe," too.

Screen 'Heavy' Finds 'Cats' an Aid to Score

Whip-Cracking Helps Golf; Seasickness Aids Pen; Hollywood Items.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, May 11.—Six lions and one tiger co-operated in slicing ten strokes off his golf score, boasts red-headed Barton ("Dillinger") MacLane.

MacLane, who is still trying to live down his role as "wooden pistol John" in "G-men" has to climb gingerly into a cat cage and boss the beasts around for his heavy part in "Bengal Killer."

"I had to learn to handle a bullwhip to impress the cats," he explained, "and practiced for days on end to get the proper 'pop.' While I was learning to be a whipper-snapper I passed up golf, and it didn't occur to me that golf, like whipsnapping, is all in the wrists.

"Previously I had always dubbed around the 90's and my best score was 92. But the first time I shot a round after graduating as a whipper-in, I turned up an 85. It didn't seem possible, so I played another round, and darned if I didn't shoot an 82."

"I'm gonna buy a whip," yelled a locker room crony, reaching for his hat.

"It isn't as easy as that," cautioned MacLane. "Better buy a set of lions and tigers, too. Without their inspiration you'll never get the proper snap into your wrist work."

Mal-de-Mer Helps.

Writers found John Ford and Dudley Nichols are sailing to the Panama Canal to write a story about Ireland, but they say geography has nothing to do with their search for Gaelicism.

"We just want to get away from it all," said Ford, "but maybe we do write better when a little seasick. It was on a similar trip that we wrote the adaptation for "The Informer."

With them on Ford's yacht, Arander, go Joseph August, camerman, and Edward Donahue, director. They'll be gone six weeks.

A Fish Story.

Fred MacMurray and Carol Lombard have the last laugh on the ocelatus, a red-hot South American sucker who stole a scene from them in "The Princess Comes Across." The fish was supposed to leap out of the water and bite MacMurray when he reached into a tank to retrieve Lombard's purse, but the bit fell victim to the cutter's shears.

It develops that the ocelatus couldn't jump high enough to be properly visible in a medium full shot and glass and water halation spoiled closer work.

Surprise! Surprise!

Charles Ruggles is set to do "Tight-Wad," Paul Gallico's newspaper story, but he won't play a "newspaperman."

Ruggles is cast as an auditor who appears but briefly in the original, which makes it a safe bet that the movie version will be a surprise to Gallico.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky.

Extra, Extra.

Hollywood, May 11.

No one ever asks an extra for an autograph.

The extra doesn't have lunch at the Vendome, hasn't a home with swimming pool, doesn't have her photograph in the movie magazines and doesn't know where tomorrow's job is.

But the extras are an important part of Hollywood. No picture can be made without them. On certain pictures they get billing: "And a cast of over a thousand." A little exaggerated, but it's the extras' only spotlight.

At 7 a. m. a woman in an evening gown and a fur coat can be seen on a street corner waiting for a bus. She isn't coming home from an all-night party. She is an extra going to work.

Or a man may be seen attired in sports clothes. He is not on his way to the country club. He is on his way to the studio. Just another extra who tries to make a living by portraying a millionaire.

* * * *

There are several types of extras. There is even class distinction in the ranks.

Class A has the dress people—the best. They get $15 a day. These extras must own evening gowns, tuxedos, high hats, mink coats. Several times during the year Central Casting Office holds a dress parade. The extras who desire to get into this class march past a committee of judges. The best dressed extras are selected and place on the preferred list. The last dress parade started at 7 o'clock in the evening and lasted past midnight.

These extras wear their best clothes only to work. A woman will save her pennies to buy a silver fox; a man to buy a tuxedo, a cane and gloves. They seldom wear these clothes to a party. For if the suit looks shiny, if the gown appears frayed, they won't make the list at the next "parade."

* * * *

Class B also has the dress people. They are the next best. Tea gowns, sport clothes and street clothes; salary $10 the day.

Class C are just the extras. They wear ordinary street clothes; salary $7.50 a day.

An extra works eight hours a day and gets one hour for lunch. The call can be for any time. The extra must be on call for 7 in the morning, or 7 at night, or midnight. It depends on when the picture is shooting. The extra must put on make-up before arriving at the studio.

If an extra works overtime, this is the pay adjustment; one-fourth of a day's salary for two hours; one half for four hours; three-quarters for six hours and another day's salary for eight.

An extra can't be worked more than 16 hours at a stretch. And now an extra has to be allowed 12 hours' rest between calls.

* * * *

Between "takes," an extra girl, playing society gal at Palm Beach, told me of some of their difficulties.

She told of working in a musical picture. She had to wear body make-up. This means her entire body, legs, back and arms must be made up as well as her face. This requires two hours. It is more difficult to take off than put on, although it takes only an hour and a half to remove.

She had to take four baths to rid herself of the make-up. The water has to be at a certain temperature and plenty of soap is used.

She explained further that when a girl has a "dress" job that lasts for three or four days, the girl must be very careful of her one evening gown. She hasn't the time or the money to send the dress to the cleaners before going to work the next day. She cleans it herself.

"The hardest work of the extra," she went on to say, "is really just standing under those lights. And we stand under them. They take the energy out of you. When I get home I'm really tired. I lie down for ten minutes before I start to take my make-up off."

* * * *

The extra girl lives in a single room, no kitchen, for $25 a month; or two rooms and a kitchenette for about $45 a month. There is one thing they demand when selecting a rooming house—a switchboard.

For the extra is always waiting for that phone call from the central casting office or from the central agent to tell her of a job.

An extra generally lives with another extra. The advantages of doubling are many. They take turns sitting in the room all day, waiting for the phone to ring, and if one girl receives word about "a call," the other will go along and try, too.

To get a job as an extra, a person has to be registered with the Central Casting Office, except for musicals.

More about the extra in tomorrow's column.

About The Showshops

THE erection of new residential motion picture theaters in various outlying and suburban neighborhoods does not represent the sum total of the activity of the artisans of the building trades in and about the National Capital. Not to leave the newly projected Trans-Lux Theater, to be thrown up at New York avenue, Fourteenth and H streets northwest, alone in the downtown field, other interests have been going quietly about the business of improving their properties.

BELL.

The Little Theater, down on Ninth street, where revival of the foremost pictures constitutes the regular house policy, under the thoughtful and energetic direction of Mrs. Miller and the efficient house management of Abe Tolkins, has just completed the installation of a thoroughly modern air conditioning and refrigeration plant.

This new equipment was put in operation for the first time last Saturday and adjustments were completed yesterday. It is now in fine working order for the summer season. An unusual feature of this installation is that it is subject to dual thermostatic control, temperature and humidity being regulated both with regard to interior comfort and the comparative range of outdoor conditions. This is designed to overcome the usual wide discrepancy between a cooled inside temperature and a smothering oven heat outdoors.

At almost any minute now, announcement may be broadcast of important improvements soon to be made in the RKO-Keith Theater on Fifteenth street, presided over by Manager Hardie Meakin. There is a plan afoot to rip off the present marquee, remodel and modernize the entrance, install a new box-office and adapt the lobby to the needs of its present uses.

The requirements of handling large movie crowds never have been met by the present architectural design of Keith's, which was planned and built as a tabernacle of the two-a-day, back in that distant era when vaudeville was vaudeville. Now all that is to be corrected—and at a cost of between $25,000 and $50,000.

It is to be hoped that out of this generous allotment there will be found a spot of cash for those new seats we have heard so much about for so many years now—seats with racks underneath where you can park the hat and everything.

But the real point is that "show business" is looking up, and no longer for the single reason that it is flat on its back and can't look any other way. The boys are beginning to spend dough again and are just a little surprised that they haven't forgotten how, after all these years.

* * * *

The same general report is turned in by that distinguished emissary of the world's greatest show under canvas, Frank Braden, who breezed into town Saturday night and into the tesselated magnificence of the drama department yesterday afternoon. Mr. Braden whose nimble talents are dedicated to the fortunes of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Baily Combined Circ—it was he who engineered the plopping of that midget into the J. Pierpont Morgan lap at that Senate committee hearing a few seasons ago—brings word that his tents are bulging with greater crowds than have poured into them for years. The show is in Brooklyn this week, under canvas that is still spotlessly white, and will be here a week from yesterday under the same kind of tops—if it doesn't rain in the meantime. Mud is no help toward keeping the canvas clean. This Braden fellow is very elegant copy. There will be more of him, I am afraid, in this space before the week is out. Don't say I didn't warn you!

* * * *

Amplifying yesterday mornings brief announcement of the fifth annual Music Festival, scheduled to begin on the stage of Loew's Fox Theater this Friday, it will be of interest that groups embracing singers and instrumentalists from public schools, colleges, churches, music societies and business organizations will be participants in the celebration. Those signifying their intention of taking part include the Washington Choral Society, Washington Musical Institute, the Russian Chorus, Tuesday Evening Music Club, Alexandria Music Study Club, Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church Choir, University of Maryland glee clubs, C. and P. Telephone Co. Glee Club, American University Glee Club, the Octavians, Eastern High School Mixed Chorus, quartet of the Washington Musical Institute, McKinley High School boys glee clubs, Ted Loman and the Francis boys from the Washington Musical Institute, Washington-Lee High School Senior Girls Glee Club, the string-wood ensemble of Washington Musical Institute, the Chadwick Orchestra, the Hawaiian Ensemble, Sophocles Pappas, Second Regiment Band of McKinley High School and the music section of the Boys Club of Washington.

A specific schedule of the days and hours on and at which these respective groups will apear will be made known in due course.

* * * *

Another of yesterday afternoon's callers was Robert Harron, representing "Jock" Whitney and Pioneer Pictures, producers of that latest of the three-tone, Technicolor features, "The Dancing Pirate," opening at RKO-Keith's, with Charles Collins, Steffi Duna and Frank Morgan in the principal roles. This is said to be the finest demonstration to date of the full potentialities of natural color photography. And this Charlie Collins, by the way, is the husband of Dorothy Stone and son-in-law of Fred Stone, former musical comedy star and now in films. He and Paul Draper are more or less in a dead heat, as we say at "Three Men on a Horse," as runner-upper to Fred Astaire as the cinema's foremost exponent of the art of pickin' 'em up and layin' 'em down.

* * * *

The postman rang twice.

From Rudy Vallee, a cordial note from Steinway Hall in New York, where he evidently paused on his way to that camp in Maine. Hopes I was not annoyed by a scrambled date when he was here at the Fox, which was my fault and not his. So I was not annoyed. At least not at him.

Then from the Palmer House, in Chicago, an expansive letter, reading, in part, as follows: "Dear Nelson: Having a fine time here in the Empire Room. I am featured in the floor show and not with Ted Weems Band, as I understand has been reported. Georges and Jalna are the headliners—you remember them with Xavier Cugat's Orchestra—what dancers! Also Serge Flash, Ted Adair and others. Seem to be going over O. K., so far . . . If you get around backstage at my alma mater (Ed. note: That would be the Earle Theater), give Freddie Clark and the boys a howdee-do for me. Will be seeing you soon—maybe. Regards. (Signed) BERT GRANOFF."

What? No message to Audrey?

As-We-Say-in-the-Pure-Castilian Note.

The message from one Bell to another—no relation—this morning is that they are screening "A Message to Garcia" today at 1:30. We are laying as high as 11 to 10 that they pronounce it "Garshia," instead of "Gar-see-ah," with the accent on the second syllable. Might as well call Mr. Heigh-Ho, Pete "Mashias."

Discord Blocks Pan-American Labor Meeting

A. F. L. Decides Not to Call Meeting; Plea Entered by Mexicans.

By the Associated Press.

The Confederation of Mexican Workers put before Secretary Perkins yesterday their plea for Mexican-American labor solidarity almost simultaneously with a decision by the American Federation of Labor executive council against calling a Pan-American federation meeting at this time.

The Mexican workers were represented by a four-man committee headed by Victor Manuel Villasenor, former counselor for the Mexican Embassy here. The group spoke for the newly-formed successor to the former Mexican Regional Workers Federation.

The American Federation of Labor executive council, after receiving a report from the Pan-American Federation, announced a convention of the latter organization would not be called at this time because the labor situation in Latin America was too disturbed.

The Mexican delegates expect to confer today with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor and the Pan-American Federation, who recently attacked alleged Fascist principles of the Confederation of Mexican Workers.

The A. F. of L. executive council also voted yesterday to steer clear of European trade union troubles, disapproving a resolution proposing that the federation renew its membership in the International Federation of Trade Unions, given up in 1916 because of a dispute over autonomy and dues.

"The situation in Europe is so disturbed that affiliation is out of the question at the moment," said Green. "If we joined again, we might become involved in their difficulties."

The council also voted down a proposal to boycott wool and mutton products. The sheepshearers union had asked for such a boycott because of its difficulty in obtaining a wage agreement with the wool growers of the Rocky Mountain area.

Tax Inquiry Hears British Aid's Son

London, May 11 (AP).—Evidence that Alfred Bates, an old friend of Colonial Secretary J. H. Thomas and his son, had taken out considerable insurance against budget tax increases was given today at the opening session of a judicial inquiry into the alleged leakage of budget information.

Leslie Thomas, son of the colonial secretary, testified that on April 14, seven days before the budget was introduced in the House of Commons, he was instructed by Bates to sell gilt-edged stocks worth £25,000 (about $125,000) and that he effected insurance for Bates for £4,000 (about $20,000) against a possible change in the income tax rate.

The younger Thomas, partner in a stock-brokerage firm, agreed with Justice Porter, presiding at the inquiry, that it was unwise for the son of a cabinet minister to deal with insurance on the budget, but said he had not realized it at the time.

The alleged "leak" that taxes on incomes and tea were going to be raised brought about a premature rush for insurance against the taxes, which were announced April 21.

College Scholarship Offered Quintuplets

Callander, Ontario, May 11 (AP).—The Keys quadruplets from Waco, Texas, presented the Dionne quintuplets of Callander, Ontario, today with four-year scholarships at Baylor University, which the Keys attend.

The pretty 20-year-old Texas girls, on an international visit to the quintuplets in the interests of the Texas Centennial, said Baylor authorities were arranging that the quintuplets have the same rooms the quadruplets occupy should they decide to accept the scholarships—some 15 years hence.

Marie Dionne had a black eye and it rained today, but neither fact spoiled the visit of the Keys to the Dionnes.

The black eye was the result of a disagreement the smallest of the quints had with a door a few days ago. It cleared up so well today the Keys sisters though Marie just as beautiful as her four sisters. Leota, Mona, Mary and Roberta Keys brought the quints dolls and other presents.

23 Seamen Arrested In N. Y. Dock Disorder

New York, May 11 (U.P.).—Police tonight arrested 223 striking seamen who refused to move from the dock of the Panama Pacific liner Virginia and charged them with disorderly conduct. It was the largest mass arrest of the year.

Vincent Kaladz, 33, was charged with inciting to riot and Charles McIntosh, cab driver, was injured by a brick. Police denied there was any riot, although riot squads were called out.

The Virginia is a sister ship of the S. S. California, center of the insurgent water-front strike begun by a minority group of the International Seamen's Union.

Graff Off on First Trip From Port at Frankfort

Frankfort on the Main, Germany, May 11 (AP).—The Graf Zeppelin left its new home port here tonight for the first time on a regular trip to South America.

With the damage suffered in an accident at Rio de Janeiro now repaired, the Graf took off from its new hangar, which is claimed to be the largest in the world.

Twenty passengers were aboard.

Garrison at Palestine Increased by England

Jerusalem, May 11 (AP).—The normal British garrison of Palestine was increased by more than a third when a battalion of a thousand British soldiers arrived today by train from Egypt.

The reinforcements were accompanied by 18 light tanks and armored cars.

Declared Most Beautiful Girl

It was Rolf Armstrong, noted painter of lovely ladies, whose discerning eyes detected in this young woman all of the qualities necessary to make her his choice of "the most beautiful American girl." She is Marla Shelton, featured with that hardy star of "horse opera," Buck Jones, in "The Phantom Rider," of all things! As a matter of fact, there are two beauties in this picture—the Russian wolfhound is pretty good looking, too! Borzoi, if you'have on the high hat.

Imaginative Defense.

Good defensive play, in nine hands out of ten, is a matter of partnership co-opeartion. Even though one defender may have a strong hand and his partner a weak one, they still can collaborate to splendid advantage.

When an expert is saddled with a poor partner, however, the expert's individual defensive play must not be merely good—it often must be brilliant! It is not enough for him to make no mistake himself. He must, whenever possible, plan his play so that partner cannot make one either.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 Heart	Pass	2 No trump	Pass
3 Hearts	Pass	4 Hearts (final bid)

East, with a well balanced hand, should have raised the no trump instead of rebidding his heart suit. At a nine trick contract no defense could have availed.

Against four hearts South opened his singleton club, not in order to ruff a return of the suit so much as to protect his high cards. Dummy played low and North's eight forced declarer's king. Declarer's first lead was up to dummy's diamond tenace. When the queen held the trick, three rounds of trumps were played, the third going to South's queen. On the last round of hearts North discarded a low club, which gave the astute South player an approximate "count" on the hand. He knew declarer had originally held five hearts. North would not have thrown away a club that was needed as a guard to dummy's four card suit, and must, therefore, have begun with at least five clubs, in which case declarer had three. Declarer therefore had five cards divided between spades and diamonds, with the jack of the latter suit as a possible menace.

After much thought South laid down the king of spades! Declarer won the ace and promptly returned his low spade, but North's Q 10 formed a tenace over dummy's J 9, and no further trick in spades could be won by declarer. Moreover, he still had to lose one diamond and one club trick, and therefore went down to defeat.

A spectator asked South why he had chosen to lead the spade king rather than the more normal play of the fourth best spade. South whispered his reply so that his partner could not hear.

"I was afraid that my own partner might squeeze me if a certain distribution of cards existed. As a matter of fact, it did exist and I'll bet anything that I would have been squeezed. Follow the play on the lead of a fourth best spade. North's ten would force declarer's ace. Now declarer would lead to the ace of clubs and I could, of course, discard a diamond. Another club would be won by North and again I would have to discard. This time I could let go either a spade or a diamond in safety. But it's dollars to doughnuts that on the next two plays I would be squeezed. North would be certain to lead his high club instead of either a spade or a diamond, his proper play. Declarer would ruff the club and lead his last trump. Now look at my position. I either would have to blank my diamond king or my spade king, or throw the latter away. In any of these cases we could not take another trick."

And close inspection of the hand proved that his analysis was completely sound.

Little Fails in Test For U.S. Open Golf; Cox Gains Place

Barnett, Walper, of D.C., Successful in Trial at Baltimore.

By Dave Herman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Hillendale Country Club, Towson, Md., May 11.—After a day of hectic golfing in which the hopes of many favorites were blasted by the trickery of Hillendale's greens and fairways, two Washington, D. C. golfers, Bob Barnett, veteran Chevy Chase professional, and Leo Walper, Bethesda driving range instructor, today qualified for the National Open golf championship.

Barnett captured one of the four qualifying places allotted the section with a 36-hole total of 145, 5 over par, while Walper, with a 146, was forced to win his open berth after a one-hole play-off with Ilut Coffey, young Winchester, Va., pro.

Ralph Beach, Suburban pro, formerly of Burning Tree, and Johnny Bass, 24-year-old Clifton Park tutor, were the other qualifiers.

Beach Sets Pace.

Beach set the pace with blistering rounds of 70-71 for a 141, while Bass, whose 68 was low in the morning, emerged second with 142.

These four will represent the Iddle Atlantic sector in the Open at Baltusrol, June 4, 5 and 6.

Fourteen other District golfers, four of whom were amateurs, failed to make the grade, some of them cracking up tragically along the stretch.

Charlie Pettijohn, 17-year-old Georgetown University student, a member of Congressional, missed a tie with Walper and Coffey by one stroke. He had 73-74, after playing the first nine of the afternoon in 36.

Cliff Spencer, tall Beaver Dam professional, who qualified last year, and created quite a furore in the open at Oakmont, got along famously in the morning with a 72, but was all over the lot in the nightcap journey for a 76 and a 148 total. This was the same total posted by George Diffenbaugh, Indian Spring professional, whose 73 in the morning was featured by a sterling sub-par 34 on the incoming nine. Diffenbaugh had tough breaks on the first nine in the afternoon, using up 40 strokes. He rallied nicely for a 35, two too many.

A strong but futile comeback was made by 17-year-old Drownell Manor amateur, who, after blowing to the extent of an 81 on a rousing last-nine rally—a 34—to carve out a 72. Al Treder, Manor pro, taking Philosophical in Defeat, Loses Hope Near End of Test.

West Hartford, Conn., May 11.—W. Lawson Little, who trilled the golfing world with his feats as an amateur, today flopped in his first try as a professional to qualify for the United States Open golf championship.

Little toured the rain-soaked Wampanoag course here in 77—75—152, a score which crowded him away back among the also rans in this New England sectional trial. Eight men were selected to represent the section. Little was in fourteenth place, in a tie with three others.

Is Philosophical.

The two-year British and American amateur titleholder was philosohpical after his startling collapse in the medal play.

"What the heck!" he said, with a forced smile. "Im only 25. Ill be playing at least 25 years more and, believe me, I'll be in there fighting every year. I'll certainly qualify in years to come."

It was Little's short game whcih failed him when he needed it most. His putts wouldn't work. His approaches just wouldn't approach. Nothing would work right.

"My game has been pretty terrible recently, anyways," he declared, as 4,000 pop-eyed spectators buzzed.

"You know," he went on, "when I first came up here they told me the course would be a cinch, that it was easy.

"But let me tell you it's the toughest qualifying course I ever played. I was especially troubled by the length of the holes. What long ones!"

To Error Is Fatal.

Little stressed the fact that once you err on one of Wampanoag's tees or fairways or greens, you're sunk.

"You can't make a slip," he moaned. "If you do, sure as heck you're gonna be over par. And you won't be able to catch up."

Little said he was leaving tonight by motor for Chicago where he expects to arrive Wednesday morning.

Writers who followed the amateur sensation around the course were amazed at his failure to bear down when he neared the end of the second 18 and still had a faint chance to qualify.

On the fifteenth, instead of shooting across a small pond, Lawson picked up the ball and played from the other side, taking a penalty stroke.

Detroit Defeats Tribe to Gain In League

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 11.—The Detroit Tigers climbed back into the first division in the American League by defeating the Cleveland Indians, 8-3, here today.

The champions hammered the ball all over the lot at the start of the game, scoring six runs on nine hits off Johnny Allen in the four innings he worked.

Meantime, Tommy Bridges was having things his own way with the Indians. He let them have a run in the third when he committed a fielding error and Frankie Pytlak doubled, but he shut them out from then until the ninth, when they got their other two runs. They managed to get only five hits off him altogether.

Champion and Champion-to-Be Swap Lefts at Griffith Stadium

Post Staff Photos.

The winner and new champion. Petey Sarron greets the crowds' cheers at the finish with his hands still raised in token of the victory that brought him the world featherweight title.

What They Said After Battle

"I've had a lot of tougher fights."—Petey Sarron.
"That low punch in the first round bothered me."—Freddie Miller.

Gleefully posing for pictures, signing autograph books and ringing the hands of his well wishers in his dressing room after the fight, Petey Sarron was a wildly happy lad as the newly crowned featherweight champion of the world.

"I've got Miller's number," he said. "He doesn't know how to fight me. Boy, I wanted that title bad, and I wasn't going to let it slip when I knew I had him beat in the middle of the fight. When I found out he couldn't stand me off, I never let him get set. When he started to get desperate in those late rounds, he was a set-up for me. He hurt me once, with a left hook in the seventh that caught me on the face, but he never landed that one again. And Jim Erwin fixed my eye up swell. I'll fight Miller any time.

Miller, the dethroned champion, was rushed to his dressing room immediately following the decision against him, and his manager, Pete Reilly, secluded him from reporters.

Speaking for Miller, Reilly declared: "Freddie never recovered from that low blow in the opening round. That took a lot out of him. And so did those two pounds he had to take off with roadwork before the weighing-in this afternoon. We don't have any kick about the decision. It was a lot of trouble for Freddie to make that weight. I don't know that we want a return bout with Sarron. Maybe Freddie will fight as a lightweight or junior lightweight after this. But I counted four low punches in those early rounds that did a lot of damage to Freddie."

TIME OUT! By Chet Smith

You'd better keep him in another 15 minutes—I think he was a wrestler.

Big League Boxing in Capital

In the big league setting of Griffith Stadium, the Nation's Capital as a fight town went distinctly big-league last night.

Only two years removed from its shady fistic past, when bootleg bouts staged in semi-stealth across the river, provided its pugilistic menu, Washington 21,000 strong, descended upon Mr. Griffith's ball yard to see a world's champion put his title on the line.

Into Griffith Stadium, a fistic arena for a night, they began to filter long before sundown, did the dollar-ticket holders intent upon seizing the choiest general admission seats. For some few thousand of them it was a five-hour wait until Champion Freddy Miller and Challenger Petey Sarron entered the ring for the piece de resistance of the program.

It was a new kind of pitch-and-catch program in the ball yard that for days had resounded to the cheers of the baseball multitudes. Fanlike from the ring, pitched over second base, the ringside seats, sparsely populated when the preliminary boys' gloves were flying, spread toward the field boxes.

There they met a solid backdrop of humanity hidden in the darkness of the upper and lower decks of the grandstands. The ring, bathed in powerful lights, provided a brilliantly animated centerpiece for the huge gathering in the stands, distinguishable only by the flare of match lights that appeared like so many fireflies operating in the black.

By 8 o'clock the important folks, at least those who separated themselves from $5.50 each for ringside tickets, were making their appearance in great numbers. Congress was generously represented, with Senators Minton, of Indiana; Harrison, of Mississippi; Thomas, of Oklahoma, peering through the resin dust from choice seats, and PWA Administrator Harry Hopkins sitting with his chin almost resting on the ring.

Hundreds of Cops.

Big shots were, indeed, a dime a dozen. And so were coppers. It was, in fact, the coppers' show. After a noble act of selling tickets to boost the gate to the high-sounding figures of $40,000, the profits of which were to go to the Metropolitan Police Boys Club, the coppers themselves were on hand by the hundreds. Never was a sports event so well policed.

Bases Groan As Phils Bow To Giants

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 11.—The Phillies hit five home runs to the New York Giants one here today," but New York's came from the bat of Mel Ott in the ninth inning, when two men were on, and gave the Giants a 13-to-12 victory.

The lead changed five times during the ball game. The Giants used five pitchers, the Phillies three, and there were 31 hits in all, the home club outhitting the winners, 16-15.

Ott also did very well in his other turns at bat. He got a walk, a single and a double, and altogether drove in eight runs.

The five Philadelphia homers were made by Dolph Camilli, who hit two; Art Whitney, Leo Norris and Johnny Moore.

New Champion's Great Finish Is Deciding Factor

Referee's Vote Gives Syrian Title After 15 Fast Rounds; 21,000 See City's Championship Bout; Sarron's Eye Cut.

By Bill McCormick.

Pete Sarron, a perennial challenger for these many years, last night reached the pinnacle by punching Freddie Miller out from under the 126-pound crown he has worn so very creditably for more than two years.

A near-capacity crowd, estimated at more than 20,000, swarmed into Griffith Stadium to watch Miller, decisively beaten, bow out of the picture as should a real fighting champion—still flinging punches desperately in defense of his laurels, even as the bell sounded ending the final fifteenth round.

All the officials seemed to lean over backwards to give the retiring champion his due, which is no more than right when a fighting man is battling to keep his hard-earned honors.

Judge Robert Eller cast his vote for a draw. Judge Frank Schuyler declared Sarron the winner by a score of 71 to 67. Referee Eddie LaFond, who handled his duties in the ring as befits a championship match, cast the die by declaring the little Birmingham Syrian had scored 69 points to the dethroned champion's 68.

To Meyer Rowan, the heavy-hitting colored lightweight champion of New York, went the credit for scoring the first knockout on the card, Rowan laid Andy Bundy, colored champion of the Pacific Coast, on the floor so decisively with a

The Title Fight Round by Round

ROUND ONE—Sarron ducked under a right and landed a left to the head. The challenger dug both hands to the body and caught a right hand to the head. The challenger rode a long left hand into the head and they went into an even body exchange. Pete dug a half dozen light lefts and caught a hard left to the body. Sarron rushed the champion off balance, but did no harm. Sarron landed a low right and was warned by the referee, Eddie Lafond. Miller spun Sarron off balance and they were in that position at the bell. Miller's round on low blow.

RNOUND TWO—Sarron failed in connect with two body blows, then danced away from a right lead.

Have you eyes that seek pleasure?

How to read character in the eyes and lips of men and women

Eyes that seek pleasure

Eyes... lustrous, round and wide open—with bushy brows arched well above the nose—full lower lids. The wide-awake eyes of those constantly on the alert for life's pleasures.

Lips that desire to eat, drink, and be merry

Lips... moist, and high in coloring... lower lip distinctly fuller than the upper. Such lips relish luxurious fare at the table... they belong to the gay type you will always find delighting in good times and good cheer.

Blown Fuse, "Dizzy" Races, Spill Enliven Poor Pimlico Card

Duffy Thrown, Capstan Ruled Out, Double Pays $495.60.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, May 11.—One of the worst programs ever offered Maryland fans on the "big time" circuit was staged here today and failed to have a feature race. The third event of the day caused a fuse to blow out on the results board, making it a trifle more outstanding than any other.

It was only fitting that something should blow out. It was a rip-snorting struggle of a dozen fugitives from the ash department livery stable and the horses finished reverse the order in which they were bet.

Out of the tangle came Top Shell to burst across the finish line in front of a $95.80 winning mutuel. The Swagman was second at $55.40 to place and Royal Cunning, a mere 12-1 shot was third. Top Shell teamed with Prevaricate to produce a $495.60 daily double mutuel which added to the confusion.

With some 8,000 witnesses, the race was one to be remembered. Per Diem had a lead of a city block swinging for the stretch with Careless Knight another city block ahead of the third horse. These were the heavily played members of the field and with a quarter of a mile to go, it appeared a mere formality for them to finish first and second. However, neither was in the money.

The Swagman was a good 25 lengths away from the pacemaker at the far turn but he would have won but for being blocked in the stretch run. Royal Cunning tried to imitate a statue of a horse at the break but he held a brief lead in the late stretch before Top Shell and the Swagman came along.

This "dizzy handicap" came right on the heels of a jumping race that packed almost every kind of thrill.

Poppyman, the property of John Hay Whitney, was the winner but was probably the fourth best horse as the race was run. Dangay was second and would not have been in the money under normal circumstances. Axacan was third and probably deserved that place. Hoursend was fourth through the medium of staying on his four legs.

Capstan was the chief offender in the race. After running head and head with Canienta, the favorite, he suddenly bolted out of the course going to the tenth fence and carried Canienta with him. The pair were far ahead of the field. With these horses thus removed from competition, the fans looked for a new leader and found Persian Prince. He too bit the dust at the twelfth fence, falling and throwing Jockey Duffy to the turf.

It was then that Poppyman was established as the pace-setter. Then Axacan had his troubles. Saving much ground swinging into the final jump, the gelding looked as if he might take the purse. However a bandage on his hind leg became loose and he tripped along into third money.

Is Ruled Off.

The stewards saw enough of Capstan and he was ruled off the course for the meeting.

Theoutstanding incident of the steeplechase was the resurrection of Persian Prince. When he struck the ground, he laid still and the crowd as well as officials believed hi mon the way to horse heaven. The "dead horse" wagon was summoned. When it arrived at the scene, Persian Prince suddenly came to, bounded up and would have started to ru nagain had not a stableman grabbed his bridle. The horse then marched off to his stable, apparentl ynone the worse.

The camera was kept busy all afternoon. The judges waited for the pictures whether they needed them or not. In the first race, the photo separated Prevaricate and Fleeting Moon with the Vanderbilt horse taking the decision at $7.80.

Chestnut Farms Tied By Gulf Oil Nine, 4-4

Gulf Oil and Chestnut Farms Dairy labored through eight innings yesterday in a Capital City League game of The Washington Post Sandlot Association on the West Ellipse and then found themselves at a 4-to-4 tie at the finish. The game was called on account of darkness.

Ollie Tipton, former high school star, pitched three-hit ball for Chestnut Farms while his team was battering the opposition for ten hits, which were kept well scattered.

PREVARICATE away nicely but unable to race along with the pacemaker, came determinedly when reaching the homestretch, and, closing fast under a stout drive, was up in the last strides. FLEETING MOON, away in good fashion, raced RYAN into submission in the first half-mile, saved ground after moving clear midway of the homestretch, but weakened suddenly in the last sixteenth. CHALPHONE improved his position on the outside and finished with good courage. AMHURST, taken to the outside for the start, after acting unruly, raced forwardly and had no excuses. MOLASSES BOB closed a good gap. FYAN displayed nice speed for three furlongs, then stopped badly. MAKALAW saved ground, but could not threaten. HAPPY HOST was never formidable. CHERRY CAN and PRAIRIE PRINCE broke sluggishly.

SECOND RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Raceland Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:51. Off at 2:53½. Winner, J. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—POPPYMAN, $8.30, $4.80, $4.10; DANGAY, $9.30, $4.80; AXACAN, $6.10.

POPPYMAN, reserved for the first turn of the field, went into an easy lead when CAPSTAN and CANIENTO went out of the course at the tenth fence, drew clear after PERSIAN PRINCE fell at the next to last fence, and was kept under severe urging to the finish. DANGAY battered his position slowly, fenced well, but could not trouble the winner after making a bold spurt coming to the final jump. AXACAN went into a forward position when other contestants were eliminated. He was held perfectly safe in the late stages. HOURSEND fell far out of contention after the first two fences and was never a factor. PERSIAN PRINCE, prominent in the early running to take command after the two leaders left the jumping course, but fell heavily at the twelfth jump. CAPSTAN carried CANIENTO out of the course going to the tenth jump. CURTAIN CALL went very lame and was pulled up at the sixth jump. Thorndike lost both of his stirrup irons on CURTAIN CALL at the second fence.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. The Pocomoke. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:22. Off at 3:26. Winner, G. S. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOP SHELL, $95.80, $41.10, $15.90; THE SWAGMAN, $55.40, $24.20; ROYAL CUMMING, $10.70.

TOP SHELL, going in his best form and placed forwardly in the early running, swung to the outside when reaching the homestretch, closed stoutly, and was up in the last strides. THE SWAGMAN, slow to settle in his stride, circled his field and finished full of run. ROYAL CUNNING broke into the air when the start came, moved into contention rapidly, but had too much taken out of him getting to the leaders and he tired in the last furlong. CARELESS KNIGHT raced closest in pursuit of PER DIEM, but failed to menace during the final test. HALLOO finished stoutly after being outrun early. PER DIEM opened up a commanding lead in the first five furlongs, but stopped badly under a hard drive. GOLD CLIP went forwardly, but was not good enough when the real issue came. SPATTERDASH lacked early speed. SKIPPING GIRL had no excuses.

DAILY DOUBLE (FIRST AND THIRD RACES) PAID $495.60.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRACE BUNTING, $15.90, $8.40, $6.10; IDLE WORKER, $6.10, $5.10; LADY VA VA, $5.40.

GRACE BUNTING, hustled into a contending position after getting away forwardly, swung very wide into the homestretch when engaging the leaders, rallied to a hard drive and was up in the closing strides. IDLE WORKER forced a steady pace while following REE, assumed a slight lead in the last furlong, but could not withstand the determined challenge of the winner. LADY VA VA worked her way up gradually after getting into her best stride and finished with good energy while saving ground. VERITAS raced in the thick of contention with good courage in the final drive. PEPPERY began slowly, was forced to race wide, and could not menace at any stage. SCOTCH DON could not threaten. SCOUT ON was squeezed back soon after the start. REE stopped badly after leading for five furlongs.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. The College Park. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:26. Off at 4:27. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DISTRACTING, $7.70, $4.80, $3.60; ABBOT'S LAST, $7.20, $4.50; HOOPS, $4.20.

DISTRACTING, eased back off the pace after outrunning her field to the first turn, rallied willingly when shaken up in the last five-sixteenths, responded to strong handling and, closing fast under punishment, was up in the last strides. ABBOT'S LAST moved up fast on the outside of the leaders going to the stretch, sprinted into a clear lead, but tired fast in the closing furlong after saving much ground. HOOPS, slow to settle in his stride, finished full of run in the last half-mile after saving ground. SUN WAY circled his field and was going stoutly nearing the finish. SAND CLOUD faltered after moving up resolutely at the final turn. CANIMAR closed a big gap. PETEE BLUE was used up chasing THRUSTER and he tired. THRUSTER appeared sore and was done after going six furlongs.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DONA DULCIN, $9.10, $4.10, $2.70; MAD EAGLE, $4.80, $2.80; REPEAL, $2.30.

DONA DULCIN, steadied close to the early pacemaker, responded nicely when shaken up in the last five-sixteenths and, finishing determinedly under a strong ride, wore MAD EAGLE down in the closing sixteenth. MAD EAGLE was rated after getting to the front entering the backstretch, saved ground all the way and continued stubbornly to the end. REPEAL was kept within striking distance of the leaders early, moved up menacingly entering the homestretch and was wearing the first two down gradually at the close. FOGGY DAWN, forced to race on the outside from the beginning, passed tiring horses in the last quarter-mile. CAMPRA had no excuses. POST BRIGADE was roused sharply just after the start, but failed to threaten. FIFE was outrun. BUDDY BOO was done after six furlongs.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. The Glencoe. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:31. Off at 5:34½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JAKOVIA, $8.80, $3.50, $3.10; MISS SNOW, $2.80, $2.40; ARGOAN, $3.50.

JAKOVIA took command with the start, stalled off keen contention from MISS SNOW and, under severe urging, drew out slowly in the closing furlong. MISS SNOW followed close to the winner from the beginning, was placed to severe punishment in the last quarter-mile, but was not good enough. ARGOAN was a strong factor for the first five furlongs, then weakened. CORA KAY was strongly ridden all the way, but could not menace. MAY V. lost ground in the last half-mile and failed to menace. ITALIAN HARRY was never a factor. CHANNING was held safe. MISS FERN displayed early speed.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. The Boykin. For 3-year-olds and upward (division of sixth race). Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZEMBLA, $6.90, $4.10, $3.00; GOODY GOODY, $11.50, $5.90; MANUAL, $7.20.

ZEMBLA, allowed to race along on her own courage in the early racing, reached her field leaving the backstretch, came to the outside to take command in the last furlong and drew out as if much the best. GOODY GOODY, racing prominently in the early races, finished gamely when put to a hard drive, but was no match for the winner. MANUAL fell back leaving the backstretch, rallied to punishment, and finished gamely while passing tiring horses. AMERICAN BELLE displaced CROSSING OVER when reaching the final bend, saved ground, but failed to stay when the real issue came. INFILEE could not enter contention at any stage.

Mike Briggs Holds Colonials to Three Hits as Elon Wins, 5-1

Wins Mound Duel With Lanier

Visitors Get Three Runs in Ninth to Clinch 5-1 Decision.

Too much southpaw pitching against a predominantly southpaw-hitting team spelled disaster to George Washington's nine yesterday at East Ellipse. Elon College, with Lefty Mike Briggs yielding but three hits, won a 5-1 decision to inflict the first college defeat of the season on the Buff's record.

Briggs, whose form on the mound was as fine as his effectiveness, granted but one hit during the first eight innings, this being a single to center by Johnson in the fourth. His deep curve and change of pace were truly baffling to a Colonial array which included five successive left-hand hitters starting with the lead-off man.

In the meantime Bill Lanier, hurling for G. W., was going well enough to win the ordinary college contest, allowing but three hits in the first six innings. But the Christians got to him in the final three frames and, mixing a couple of breaks with some real hitting, pushed over five runs.

Roye was safe to open the seventh when Berg's peg pulled Price off the sack. He advanced on Fowler's single to center after Greeson bunted out to Lanier, and scored on Meile's single to left. A scratch single down third-base line by Bullock, with two away in the eighth, led to Elon's second counter, for Shelton immediately followed with a double to right that took a bad hop past Johnson.

With Briggs breezing along in great style, the Christians removed any doubt of the final result in the last inning. Roye again starting things with a single to left. Greeson again failed to bunt safely, but Fowler, who had a perfect day at bat, made his third hit to move Roye to third. Then when Meile drew a walk, filling the bases, the stage was set for another smile from Dame Fortune. Briggs' slow roller toward third was good for a single, scoring Roye, and when Lanier threw wild to the plate, Fowler also scored. Meile tallied the fifth run on Smith's fly to Horne.

George Washington escaped a shut-out in the ninth when Pinch-Hitter Brennan singled to right, moved up on Johnson's out and rounded the circuit on Price's single to center.

Nationals on Road Drop in Standings

ing in victories today against Western opposition.

But Manager Bucky Harris is setting forth upon his first Western invasion undisturbed by the comparatively low estate of the Nats who now are showing 13 victories and 14 defeats for their 27 engagements in the East.

Two triumphs over the vaunted Boston Red Sox in the recent three-game series at Washington have restored the Nats to a happy mood. The manner in which they beat left-handed pitching in two of the games and the apparent return to form of Buck Newsom were the highlights of that series.

Harris' pitching, however, still remains as his chief problem. Only Newsom and Pete Appleton of the regulars have turned in tolerable performances. Ed Linke has proved himself a distinct gamble, and Earl Whitehill will be idle for at least another week with his severely sprained ankle.

Harris is still intent on pressing Jack Russell, his ace relief pitcher, into service as a starter and the bulk of the relief work is expected to devolve upon Fred Marberry, who is accompanying the team after signing a contract today.

The Nats' manager also is hewing to his determination to use his reversible outfield against right and left-handed pitching. With Jake Powell a fixture in centerfield against all pitchers, Harris will use Hill in left and Reynolds in right against left-handers and the left-handed Johnny Stone and Dee Miles in the outfield when the Nats are facing right-handers.

Old Scores.

The Nats have an old score to settle with the White Sox in the three-game series starting on Tuesday. The Sox contributed two defeats to the five-game losing streak suffered by the Nats at Griffith Stadium.

In the series opener against Chicago, Harris will pitch Jimmy De Shong. Manager Jimmy Dykes is expected to counter with rookie, Monte Stratton, who was complete master of the Nats in the game he pitched in Washington.

Following the three games in Chicago, the Nats will move on to St. Louis for a pair of contests, thence to Detroit for three games, and thence to Cleveland for two. They will end their road trip with three games against the Red Sox in Boston.

Strong Teams Challenge.

The Berwyn A. C. of Berwyn, Md., has reorganzied under the manager of Al Buscher, former Pullman and Dixie Pig player and is seeking games with unlimited teams. A game to be played on the Berwyn field is wanted for Sunday. Call Metropolitan 9357 between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. or Berwyn 376-J after 7:30 p. m.

Browns Drop 13th in Row; Chisox Win

Chicago Piles Up 22 Hits on 5 Pitchers; Takes Game by 19 to 6.

St. Louis, May 11 (AP).—A barrage of 22 hits, eight for extra bases, enabled the Chicago White Sox to sweep their series with St. Louis today, 19 to 6, and sent the Browns to the showers smarting under their thirteenth straight defeat.

The game, played in a drizzling rain before less than a thousand fans, was a pitchers' debacle.

Five St. Louis hurlers—Leroy Mahaffey, Ivy Andrews, Earl Caldwell, Russ Van Atta and Mike Meola—could not stem the storm of bingles off the bats of Jimmy Dykes' heavy sluggers, and while John Whitehead, White Sox right-hander, held the Browns to five hits, he issued ten bases on balls.

Fred Walker, Chicago outfielder imported recently from the Yankees, hit two doubles and three singles and drove in four runs in six times up.

Brewers Rally To Win Over Printers

Score Is 6-5; Strategy in Ninth Inning Is Successful.

The Heurich Brewers scored three runs in the last inning yesterday to win an uphill 6-to-5 decision from the Union Printers in an Industrial League game. The victory was the Brewers' third in the league and one of the most spectacular of The Washington Post Sandlot Association this season.

Trailing 5 to 3 as the eighth and final frame opened, Huck Stahl, of the Brewers, socked a home run to leftfield to start the inning. Tommy Thompson drew a walk off Lefty Smith and all hands were safe when Joe Freschi's roller to Second Baseman Waple was juggled and Waple threw the ball in the crowd.

Manager Fee Collier sent himself in to bat for Ed Radtke at this juncture and Lefty Smith, of the Printers, responded by walking him to take a chance on Pitcher Shout Taylor. The Brewers tried more strategy and sent Bill Shelton in to hit for Taylor.

Shelton rapped one to Third Baseman Homan, who muffed it, and Thompson scored with the tying run. Ralph Bennie then drove in Freschi with the winning run with a long fly to the outfield.

D. C. Linksmen Qualify for Tourney

a 72 in the morning, did a 72 in the afternoon.

Levi Yoder, Kenwood amature, was in a good position to qualify after shooting a morning 72, but he dissipated his chance on the back nine, after going out in 38. His total was 148.

In the play-off with Coffey, Walper boomed out a nifty drive, rdeached the green with his second, and was down for his par 4, while the Virginia, a bit jittery, three-putted for a 5, missing a 3-footer.

Drownell Falters.

Barnett played beautiful golf, having a brace of 36's in the morning. A 7 on the sixth this afternoon forced him to take a 39, but he played the incoming nine in even 4s for a 34, missing birdies by the narrowest of margins on the last three holes.

Walper's nine-hole scores were 34—37—38—37. Three three-putt greens, starting with the ninth of the nightcap journey, dented his score.

Young Pettijohn holed a 140-yard mashie niblick for an eagle deuce on the 378-yard fifteenth this morning.

Shorey Makes Grade At Pittsburgh

Mel Shorey, East Potomac Park public links professional of Washington, was among the qualifiers at Pittsburgh, where he carded a 158 over the difficult Oakmont Country Club course. Eight others qualified from a field of 94. Par for the course is 72. Emil Loeffler was low with 150.

Shorey's scores:

New York, May 11 (AP).—Jimmy Dante, freckled-faced professional from the Braidburn (N. J.) Country Club, beat a brisk wind and a bulky field of 196 starters to lead metropolitan New York's 19 qualifiers for the National Open Golf championship today with a 36-hole aggregate of 150, or five shots over par.

Willie MacFarlane, 1925 National Open titleholder; Jimmy Hines, third ranking money winner of last winter's golf gold rush, and George Voigt, Walker Cup player, failed to qualify in the battle that saw 18 qualify with 153's or better and eight more play off for the nineteenth berth and three alternate assignments. Because of the big field, the Seawane and Inwood courses were used, but even then play wasn't completed until near nightfall.

Ranking second to Dante were Willie Goggin, of San Francisco, 1933 P. G. A. finalist; Wiffy Cox, Washington, D. C.; Byron Nelson, Ridgewood, N. J., and Albert Brosch, New York municipal course professional, who had 151's. Rudy Knepper, of New York, former Princeton Star, led the amateurs with 152.

Big

Winter Wheat Above 1935 but Under Average

Forecast of 463,708,000 Bushels Is Drop of 6% in Month.

By the Associated Press.

A winter wheat crop of 463,708,000 bushels, considerably above the 1935 production, but far below the average from 1928 to 1932, was forecast yesterday by the Agriculture Department.

The crop reporting board said crop prospects declined during April chiefly as a result of unevenly distributed rainfall and extreme temperatures. Continuation of the drought in the Southwest last month, the board said, was largely responsible for a decrease of 6 per cent in the board's forecast of winter wheat production.

While dry weather damaged crops in the Southwest, the board said excessive rains in early April over large areas of the Southeast decreased prospects for most crops of that area. The spring was reported late over the whole country east of the Rocky Mountains, throwing farmers behind with plowing and planting.

Since the first of May, the board said, there has been "a very marked improvement" in conditions chiefly as a result of warmer weather with widespread rains over most of the great plains area, where they were most urgently needed.

However, from Western Kansas to the Rio Grande, a large acreage of grain planted last fall already had been lost. Recent rains will permit the planting of spring-sown crops in most of this area, but the board reported a scanty supply of moisture in the subsoil and said the final outturn of crops will depend large upon the receipt of well distributed rains during the remainder of the growing season.

Tax on Gains Checks Trading Gay Declares

Accentuates Highs and Lows, Says Re-elected Exchange Head.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 11.—Charles R. Gay, president of the New York Stock Exchange, said today, "the tax on capital gains is continuing to create artificial scarcity of securities."

Interviewed as he swept unopposed into the presidency of the stock exchange for a second term, he expressed concern over the effects of capital gains tax on stock trading.

"This tax helped to produce higher prices in 1929," he said. "It is unscientific and tends to accentuate the valleys and peaks of stock prices. A great many stockholders feel they are locked by the tax into a situation where they are not free to realize, so they do not sell."

Asked whether he thought the Securities and Exchange Commission and higher margin requirements would lessen the chances of "another 1929," the veteran broker, who in the boom days was said to have executed some of the largest stock orders in Wall Street history, declined to venture an opinion.

"I don't think the SEC and the present margin requirements will of themselves prevent wide fluctuations," he said. "Prices reflect current opinion."

"Any undue restrictions of stock exchange activity will result in a less liquid stock market," he added.

Independent Wins.

Allen L. Lindley, former vice president of the New York Stock Exchange, was today elected a member of the governing committee, running on an independent ticket.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Droop After Early Rise in Dullest Trading Since Last Summer; Bonds Steady.

New York, May 11.—Financial markets were dull. Bond prices were steady, stocks receded slightly and commodities looked undecided. September wheat lost 1⅛ cents at 84⅛ cents a bushel.

First prices on the stock exchange were fractionally higher, but it soon was discovered that traders were in no mood to follow up the early advantage. Bids for stocks became scantier and offerings had to be absorbed at slightly reduced prices. Against the bearish implications of the total absence of a rally throughout the trading was the fact that no heavy selling drive took place. The market was simply one of drift, with a turnover of around 650,000 shares, the smallest since June 10 of last year.

Widest price fluctuations took place in the steel group. United States Steel and Bethlehem gained a point each at one time, but could not hold and closed lower. Motors also were a bit heavy. Chrysler and General lost a point or so. Hupp was the most active. Most of the utilities were down fractionally, but Telephone managed to advance a little. Rails worked irregularly higher.

Metal shares were mixed. The silvers were bid up a little, but without much conviction. Anaconda was firm, but Kennecott lost a little. Car and Foundry was a feature of an irregularly higher railroad equipment market. It rose 2 points. No great change took place among the oils. The tone was easier in the foods, merchants and rubbers.

Special conditions operated in half a dozen stocks. Pfeiffer Brewing broke 2 points to a new low price on sharply reduced earnings. Only 20 cents a share was earned in the first quarter. Louisiana Oil preferred broke and then plunged sharply ahead. Detroit & Mackinac preferred made one of its infrequent appearances. The shares rose nearly 3 points on a rather large volume of trading. Fairbanks common and preferred, at the odd lot post, drew attention with considerable activity. Continental Can continued to recover. Manville jumped 2 points. Worthington Pump issues were buoyant.

News Ignored.

Neither the week-end industrial news nor developments abroad, except in so far as the franc was concerned, had enough color to move greatly the speculative markets. Even the lifting of the call money rate to 1 per cent and a similar increase in the rate caused no great stir, for the action of the banks this morning in setting the higher rate, by agreement, had been too well advertised to give surprise. More than likely the only effect will be to increase the earnings of the banks which share the rather meager amount of money lent to brokers on time and call.

There is still no assurance that the higher rate will stick, but after all it is a fairly modest one, and the local banks have the lending situation fairly well in hand. They can keep out funds from interior banks, and it can be argued that 1 per cent is about as close to the actualities of the money market as is three-quarters of 1 per cent. A line must be drawn somewhere, although funds are as pelntiful and about as difficult to lend today as they were on October 30, 1935, when the rate on call was lifted from ¼ to ¾ of 1 per cent, that change also being merely one of convenience.

At this time a year ago call money was lent at 1 per cent, when it was cut to one-half of 1 per cent, the pressure from banks to employ their funds being at that time irresistible. So far as the brokerage house customer is concerned, no great difference will be felt. He isn't a heavy borrower now and his worry is direction of prices rather than carrying charges. The present rate is a low one, and what he actually pays is that rate plus the broker's "service charge." That adds from 1 to 2 per cent. Few suppose that the brokers will absorb the advance, but they easily could in many instances. Finally, the trading public is well aware that the higher rate is not dictated by the Federal Reserve authorities and is not aimed at speculation.

Vital Statistics.

One of the oddities in reports to the SEC is the annual statement of United Fruit Co., showing a change of $116,280 in the fixed asset account of livestock due to "births, deaths, re-classifications, etc."

Francs.

The French Socialist leader who stated he was "always hostile" to devaluation of the franc started a short covering movement in French exchange. The price rose more than a point above the level of Saturday, shutting off further gold shipments and giving the Bank of France a breathing spell. Observers know that many persons are hostile to devaluation, but that they may not see anything else eventually to do, and that Mr. Blum was not saying there would be no devaluation. The panic of the short not only put up the spot rate, but it also improved the futures market, where quotations for francs for 90 days' delivery dropped to a discount of only 39 points, against 55 points last week. Ninety-day francs were quoted at 41 points discount from the spot rate. The rally in francs against pounds was largely responsible for a fall in sterling here.

Call Money.

The increase in the call money rate will not mean much immediately to the banks, since there is so little new demand for money and the volume of such loans outstanding is relatively small. A majority of the call loans are affected, but it is estimated that only about $1,500,000 annual additional revenue for the banks will be produced at once. Since the amount lent on time is much less than the amount on time, the eventual benefits derived by banks from the rise in such rates will be smaller still and in many instances will not go into effect for as long as six months. Many time loans have several months in which to run. The increase is helpful to bank stockholders from a sentimental angle, but it adds little to the earnings available for their dividends.

Louisiana Oil.

Louisiana Oil preferred, suspected of being in a narrow "technical" corner, opened nearly half a dozen points lower. It had climbed 7 or 8 points Saturday on a beautiful boo play against the shorts. After its first drop this morning the price recovered and finally reached a new high. Some brokers called the situation in the stock "good," and in the light of the latitude given many other stocks, such as Colorado Fuel preferred, which have acted similarly, probably no great interference with the LL pr market will come.

Local Stores Lead Increases In 5th District

Sales in First Four Months Are 12.1% Ahead of Last Year.

With a gain of 8.4 per cent in department store sales for April this year compared with April, 1935, and a rise of 12.1 per cent in the first four months of 1936, Washington made the best record of any city in the Fifth Federal Reserve district, according to the report of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond yesterday.

The report, covering 57 department stores in the Fifth Federal Reserve district, announced an advance in the entire area of only 6 per cent in April and 9 per cent in the first four months of 1936. In the district as a whole, 42 stores reporting to Richmond announced an increase in dollar value volume over the figures in April last year.

The Federal Reserve System reported yesterday that the average gain in sales in the 12 Reserve districts in April was 8 per cent over last year and 9 per cent in the four months.

Sales in leading cities in the Fifth Reserve district for April and the four months compare as follows with the like periods last year:

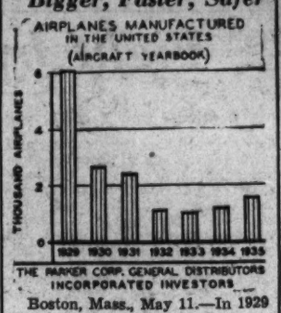
International Bank Sees Higher Prices

Basel, May 11 (AP).—A further increase in prices of goods in American and English markets, facilitating "early re-establishment of the general equilibrium" was predicted in the annual statement of the Bank for International Settlements, released today.

Heavy production of gold in 1935, which the bank's statement said amounted to the equivalent of 3,287,000,000 Swiss francs (about $1,074,000,000) was among the other factors encouraging a more optimistic attitude for recovery, the bank said.

Planes Now Costlier, Bigger, Faster, Safer



Boston, Mass., May 11.—In 1929 airplane production reached its greatest height when over 6,000,000, military and commercial, were produced. Since 1933, the low point, the gain has been entirely in the production of commercial aircraft. The average value of the commercial airplane back in 1929 was $6,300 while last year this had risen to $9,400. Planes now are bigger, faster and safer.

Wheat Forecast Surprises Bears

Chicago, May 11 (AP).—Large prospective shipments to Chicago from Kansas City, with bearish unofficial estimates of Kansas' yield this season did much today to pull wheat prices down. Surprise announcement that the May Government crop report had slashed the official estimate of 1936 total domestic winter wheat yield almost 30,000,000 bushels compared with a month ago was not made public until after trading was ended for the day.

Wheat closed nervous at the same as yesterday's finish to 1⅛ cents lower, May, 93¾@93⅞; July, 85¾@85⅞; Corn, ⅜@⅝ down, May, 62⅝@62¾; oats unchanged to ¼ off, and provisions unchanged to a decline of 22 cents.

Call Loan Rate Raised to 1% By N. Y. Banks

Interest Had Been ¾ of 1% Since October; Time Money 1¼%.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 11.—The interest rate on call loans on stock exchange listed collateral was raised today to 1 per cent from the ¾ of 1 per cent rate in effect since October 30, 1935.

The 1 per cent rate just set was the highest since April 12, 1935. On April 13, of that year ended the so-called "gentlemen's agreement" among New York banks which had held the rate at 1 per cent for more than a year.

The rate for time loans on stock exchange collateral was also lifted to 1¼ per cent from 1 per cent for maturities ranging from 60 days to six months.

The increase in money rates on security loans was forecast in Wall Street banking quarters late last week, when bankers admitted that an upward revision was under consideration to permit what they considered a more adequate return on funds loaned. The new Federal Reserve marginal requirements, it was said, also add to the banks' service burdens. Some banks had contended that a rate of less than 1 per cent for call loans did not compensate for the bookkeeping involved in the transaction.

Rate Pegged Since 1933.

With the restoration of the 1 per cent level for call money, the market for this type of funds completed a cycle which began just about a year ago.

The rate has been artifically pegged by agreement among Wall Street's lending institutions from December 7, 1933, until April 13, last year, at 1 per cent, having been raised to that figure from ¾ of 1 per cent. With the ending of the pegging agreement rates immediately declined, first to ½ of 1 per cent and then to the record low of ¼ of 1 per cent.

The latest increase is the second step by banking interests to secure a better income from their call lending. The rate was lifted from ¼ of 1 per cent to ¾ of 1 per cent October 30, last.

Money market experts were agreed that the question of return was the prime factor in the present interest rate lift, and that no substantial increase in demand had appeared recently.

Steel Tax Bill In 1935 Greater Than Earnings

$73,000,000 Paid Out in Levies; Net Revenue Was $62,961,961.

New York, May 11.—The tax bill of the American steel industry in 1935, was equivalent to a full year's pay for 57,360 employes. It was equal to $133, or over five weeks' average pay, for each of the 547,112 employes on the industry's pay rolls last year. During the year a total of almost $73,000,000 was paid in taxs to Federal, State and local governments by the industry.

These figures are based upon information reported to the American Iron and Steel Institute by 127 companies which in 1935 produced more than 90 per cent of the total output of finished steel in the country. The figures indicate that the industry's tax bill in 1935 was approximately 16 per cent greater than that for 1934, largely reflecting increased payments of Federal income taxes in accordance with improvements in earnings.

One of the interesting facts disclosed by the reports is that taxes paid by the 127 companies were larger by a substantial margin than their earnings which were only $62,961,961. Moreover, taxes were nearly double the total of $38,926,401 paid by those companies in dividends to their stockholders.

The year's tax total was equivalent to $132 for each of the industry's 551,832 stockholders. Dividends actually paid last year averaged $71 per stockholder.

65.2 Per Cent of Income.

Although tax payments are not available for all of the 127 companies prior to 1935, figures for 26 of the companies, representing a major part of the total output, have been compiled for the period since 1929. Their total tax bill from 1929 through 1935 aggregates $455,71,339. This figure is 65.2 per cent of the total income available during those years for paying taxes and for return on stockholders' investment.

In 1931 and 1934 the tax bills exceeded the income available, with the result that a portion of the taxes was paid from surplus, while in 1932 and 1933 the companies showed an aggregate deficit even before providing for taxes.

The States and municipalities in which the properties of the companies are located were by far the largest beneficiaries of the tax payments, receiving 81 cents out of each dollar of taxes paid. Over the seven-year period tax payments to State and local governments amounted to $371,158,376, while Federal taxes aggregated $84,559,963.

Federal income taxes, which reflect the earnings of the steel industry, almost disappeared from 1931 until last year. In 1935, when for the first time since 1930 the industry showed a profit, a total of $15,387,089 was paid in taxes to the Federal Government. This was about 57 per cent below the 1929 Federal taxes of $36,162,904. In 1935 net earnings were 83 per cent under those for 1929.

Boston, May 11 (AP).—(United States Department of Agriculture).—Very few spot Ohio fleece wools were being offered in Boston. New wools, however, were being offered from the country at 34-35 cents in the grease delivered to Eastern points. A number of sales were reported to have been closed recently at prices on the low side of this range for country packed combing and clothing ⅜ and ¼ blood mixed lots. Strictly combing graded Ohio wools of these grades for delivery within the next few weeks were quoted by Boston houses at 36-37 cents in the grease for ⅜ blood and at 35-37 cents for ¼ blood.

RailEquipment Orders Gather New Impetus

Contracts Placed This Year Greatly Exceed 1935 Volume.

New York, May 11.—Revival of the long-depressed railroad equipment industry is gathering momentum, although most companies, especially the rolling stock builders, are still unable to realize worthwhile profits, according to the Standard Statistics Co. today. Inquiries for equipment, which slackened in March, have picked up appreciably in recent weeks. Contracts placed thus far in 1936 show a wide expansion over the early 1935 business volume, and orders in sight should help to sustain manufacturing operations at levels well above those of late depression years.

Railway buying no doubt would proceed much more rapidly were it not for such restrictive factors as pension taxes, effective March 1, and unemployment insurance (social security) taxes, effective January 1. Uncertainty over the pending I. C. C. decision with respect to extension of emergency freight rate surcharges beyond June 30 is another retarding influence.

Many roads that are beginning to feel the pinch of inadequate or inefficient equipment are restrained from large-scale contracts by their still low credit standing. With indications of larger freight movement and carrier earnings over the intermediate term, however, the credit problem is expected to diminish.

Meantime, the basic elements affecting demand for original equipment and replacement items are attaining a potency that cannot long be denied. With retirements of rolling stock running far ahead of replacements, inventories of serviceable units continue to shrink. Obsolescence and knowledge of the economies attainable from equipment modernization are factors of growing importance.

B. & O. to Inaugurate Road-Rail Service

Baltimore, May 11.—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and the Keeshin Trans-Continental Freight Lines, Inc., largest motor truck operators in the country, are planning a joint road-rail service for less than carload freight.

The project calls for the picking up of package freight at the shipper's door by motor trucks, and hauling it to local depots, where it is classified for destination points and loaded on trailers. Placed on flat cars, the trailers are then hauled by rail to destination cities, where they are picked up by motor units for delivery of goods to individual consignees. The new service will be performed at rates now in effect for the all-highway haul.

IN THIS PART OF THE STORY, BILL, YOU'RE TELLING DENNIE WHAT MARY SAID. NOW GO AHEAD—BE NATURAL.
HULLO, DENNIE. MARY SAID, TELL YOU SHE AIN'T SEEN THE MAYOR.
NO, NO! MARY WOULD SAY, "I HAVEN'T SEEN THE MAYOR."
WELL, YUH TOLD ME TO SPEAK NATURAL.

LISTEN, REMEMBER WHAT THEY TAUGHT YOU IN SCHOOL. I HAVE NOT SEEN THE MAYOR, YOU HAVE NOT SEEN THE MAYOR, THEY HAVE NOT SEEN THE MAYOR. NOW, DO YOU GET IT?
PHOOEY, I KNOW THE ANSWER TO THAT ONE. "THEY AIN'T NONE OF US SEEN THE MAYOR."

Why Not?

By J. Carver Pusey

it's FUN to be COOLED!

We know it's fun because we're being cooled constantly by our new AIR CONDITIONING SYSTEM. And don't think you can't have an air conditioning system of your own . . . it's merely a matter of wearing the right clothing. We don't say these clothes are absolutely heat-proof but they go a long way in that direction. And the prices are as cool as a half-dozen cucumbers (on ice).

Manhattan
VERICOOL

SHIRTS—$2

That isn't a stripe you see in the above photograph . . . that's the special weave of these shirts that makes them "vericool." At regular intervals a stitch has been dropped resulting in this wide stripe-like space. It admits the cool air and permits the body warmth to escape. Manhattanized collars, of course, that stay fresh all day. Stay cool in blue or white shirts.

To maintain that cool frame of mind your underwear must fit correctly. (Binding shorts make short tempers). The makers of Manhattan shirts transfer their wizardry to the underwear business to give you shirts and shorts that keep you cool though expert fitting. New patterns and colors.

SUMMER PAJAMAS

Ah, sleep, gentlemen . . . that's where coolness counts (and counting sheep is suicidal). These lightweight batiste pajamas bring the ocean coolness to your bedside (without the sand, thank goodness). Climb into a pair if you would know cool, sleeping comfort. A variety of patterns, nicely iced and frapped.
